Prudential Risk Rating

Medium Risk

These funds may invest in multi-asset strategies with a higher weighting in equities (or with significant derivative use), while funds investing mainly in property, high yield or government bonds (such as UK Gilts) are also in this category.

These risk ratings have been developed by Prudential to help provide an indication of a fund's potential level of risk and reward based on the type of assets which may be held by the fund. Other companies may use different descriptions and as such these risk ratings should not be considered as generic across the fund management industry.

We regularly review our fund risk ratings, so they may change in the future. If, in our view, there is a material change in the fund's level of risk, for example due to a significant change to the assets held by the fund or in the way the fund is managed, we will provide information on the new risk rating. We recommend that you make sure you understand the risk rating of any fund before you invest.

You should also consider discussing your decision and the appropriateness of a fund's risk rating with an adviser.

Important Information

- Some funds may invest in 'underlying' funds or other investment vehicles. The performance of our fund, compared to what it's invested in won't be exactly the same. That can be due to additional charges, cash management (needed to help people to enter and leave our fund when they want), tax and the timing of investments (this is known as a fund's dealing cycle, it varies between managers and can be several days).

Commentary

Performance as at Q3 2024 - Over the month, markets were predominantly affected by the anticipation of, and result of, the Federal Reserve (Fed) interest rate decision. Despite the Federal Reserve (Fed) cutting by 50bps, the effect on the broad credit market was more muted than many market participants expected. However, the effect on government bond yields was more pronounced as the market viewed the Fed decision to cut interest rates by 50bps (rather than 25bps) as a sign that the Fed was prepared to act decisively in order to support economic growth. This cut was also supported by better-than-expected jobless claims in the US, alongside an upward revision to real gross domestic income. The effect on UK credit was a small increase in credit spreads by approximately 5 basis points before falling back to pre-meeting levels. By contrast, global developed market government bond yields increased, with 10-year UK gilt yields up 24bps since the announcement. This performance was weaker than expected, which is attributed in part to concerns around the upcoming UK budget. Other technical factors also contributed to the weak performance, such as an increased insurance buyout leading to increased supply of UK government bonds.
