COMMENTARY AND OUTLOOK

It was understandable that investors would go into 2023 with negative sentiment and depressed expectations following the dismal, double digit negative return performance of most developed equity markets in 2022. A combination of recession fears, rampant inflation and rising interest rates did not incentivise positivity and expectations were, in the main, depressed. This subdued tone lingered and remained a factor in producing a rollercoaster ride that persisted for many equity markets in 2023. Macro uncertainty remained the dominant force everywhere and markets flipped throughout the year as continual shifts in perception made for indeterminable outcomes and thwarted attempts to properly project after-effects that were mostly binary, time sensitive and fragile. In Canada, this back-and-forth endurance test lasted for most of the year before the S&P/TSX Composite Total Return Index (S&P/TSX) finally established a base and bottomed in late October before steadily advancing upwards to end in positive territory. Despite the gyrations experienced during the year, the S&P/TSX ended well and posted a positive 11.8% total return for the year. Canadian General Investments, Limited (CGI) NAV total return (with dividends reinvested), by comparison, was a positive 17.4%.

However, markets have lost momentum and have struggled out of the gate so far in 2024 even though nothing much has changed. The main considerations of inflation and interest rates remain of primary influence and subtle changes often produce wild swings in the market. Like déjà vu, we find ourselves back into an environment like last year's and have basically nothing to show for April with a S&P/TSX index return of 4.7%. Fortunately, CGI has had some positive follow through on its individual holding level and has done better with an NAV total return of 9.6%.

Although there will be the inevitable missteps and challenging events along the way, there appears to finally be a way forward that invokes confidence for a more comprehensible environment ahead.

CGI has stayed the course through the turbulent times of the past few years and remains committed to providing a constant and steady approach in its pursuit of value creation for its shareholders. It is a time proven strategy supported by an enviable long term historical track record. Going forward, CGI's diversification and ability to source opportunities should come to the fore and reward those investors who recognise and choose to participate in the compelling and unique investment offering that CGI represents.
