Fidelity Funds

Directors' Report

I Introduction

Fidelity Funds (the "Company") is an open-ended investment company established in Luxembourg as a société d'investissement à capital variable ("SICAV"). It has an umbrella structure and its assets are held in a number of different funds ("sub-funds"). Each sub-fund is a separate portfolio of securities and other assets managed in accordance with specific investment objectives. Separate classes of shares in the Company (the "Shares") are issued in relation to the sub-funds. Each sub-fund provides an investment opportunity in professionally managed pools of securities in different geographical areas and currencies, with the investment objective of capital growth, income or a balance between capital growth and income.

Shares are authorised for sale in a number of jurisdictions and may be listed on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange's Euro MTF market. However, shares in the Reserved Funds and the Institutional Reserved Funds are not presently listed. Further information on the stock exchange listings can be found on https://www.bourse.lu/official list or may be obtained from the Management Company upon request.

II Financial Statements

The Board of Directors of the Company (the "Board") submits its report and the audited financial statements for the year ended 30 April 2023.
The audited financial statements are set out on pages 159 to 813 of this Annual Report, with results for the year appearing in the Statement of Operations and Changes in Net Assets on pages 702 to 727. Dividend information for the sub-funds is detailed on pages 770 to 802.

A copy of the Annual Report can be found at the following web address: https://statutory.fidelityinternational.com/fidelity-funds-annual-reports/. A hard copy of the Annual Report may be obtained upon request from either the offices of the companies registered as distributors or from the Registered Office of the Company.
Comparative figures for the previous year can be found in the Annual Report of the Company for the year ended 30 April 2022.

III Activities during the year

During the year, the company followed the normal activities of an open-ended investment company. The Investment Manager's Report that follows gives an overview of performance. As at 30 April 2023, the number of registered Shareholders worldwide totalled 11,510. However, the total number of investors in the Company is much greater than the number of registered Shareholders due to the fact that certain registered Shareholders may represent the holdings of many underlying clients. Assets under management as at 30 April 2023 exceeded USD 142 billion.

The Directors may from time to time close sub-funds as well as launch further sub-funds with different investment objectives, subject to the approval of the Commission de Surveillance du Secteur Financier ("CSSF").

At the year end, the Company consisted of 139 active sub-funds.

Details of changes to the range of sub-funds during the year are provided in the Notes to the Financial Statements on pages 759 to 813.

IV Board of Directors

The Directors of the Company as at 30 April 2023 are listed on page 6. Eight of the ten Directors serving as at 30 April 2023 are considered non-executive Directors, three of whom are considered by the Board to be independent of the Investment Manager and free from any other relationship which could materially interfere with the exercise of their independent judgment.

At the Annual General Meeting of Shareholders (the "AGM") held on 6 October 2022, the election/re-election of the following Directors was approved:

Ms Anouk Agnes
Dr Yousef A. Al-Awadi, K.B.E.
Mr Romain Boscher
Mr Didier Cherpitel
Ms Carine Feipel
Mr Jeffery Lagarce
Mr Glen Moreno
Ms Anne Richards
Mr Jon Skillman
FIL (Luxembourg) S.A.

Mrs Richards stepped down as Chair of the Board, but she remains on the Board of Directors after the meeting of 23 February 2023.

The Board has appointed Mr Lagarce as Chair of the Board.

The COs have a duty to ensure that the tasks delegated to FFML and to FID as well as the administrative functions carried out by the Management Company are performed in compliance with Luxembourg Law, the Company's Articles of Incorporation and the current Prospectus. Amongst other things, the COs ensure compliance with the investment restrictions of the Company and oversee the implementation of the investment policy of each sub-fund by the appointed Investment Manager.

The Management Company and/or the COs report to the Board on a quarterly basis and the COs inform the Management Company and the Board without delay of any materially adverse matters resulting from the actions of the Investment Manager, the General Distributor or of the Management Company in relation to the administrative functions.

In addition, the Company and FIMLUX have appointed FIL to provide services in relation to the investments of the sub-funds including valuation, statistical, technical, reporting and other assistance.

Directors' Report

VII Corporate Governance

The Board applies a clear and transparent corporate governance framework for the management of the Company's affairs.

1. The Board has adopted the principles of good governance as set out in the ALFI (Association of the Luxembourg Fund Industry) Code of Conduct updated and reissued in 2022 and considers that the Company has been in compliance with it in all material respects throughout the financial year ended 30 April 2023.
2. There are contractual arrangements in place governing the relationships with FIMLUX, FFML, FID and FIL as well as other third party suppliers to the Company.
3. The Directors take decisions in the interests of the Company and its Shareholders and refrain from taking part in any deliberation or decision which creates conflict between their personal interests and those of the Company and its Shareholders.
4. The Board meets at least four times a year. The Board requests and receives reports from the COs, FIMLUX, FFML, and FID on the various activities including compliance controls and risk management undertaken by the relevant FIL companies. Senior representatives of FIMLUX, FFML and FID attend meetings by invitation, thus enabling the Board of Directors to question the reports presented to it.
5. As part of the control framework within FIL, all FIL group employees are subject to the FIL Code of Conduct and its associated policies, which, amongst other things, set out procedures for personal account dealing in securities. The Board receives regular reports from the FIL Ethics Office on Employee Personal Trading to ensure that any conflicts of interest between personal accounts dealing by FIL group staff and the interests of the Company are properly managed.
6. The nomination of new Directors is considered by the Board and is subject to the approval of the CSSF and ultimately the approval of Shareholders at the Annual General Meeting. The level of Directors' fees is put to Shareholders for approval, in accordance with the Articles of Incorporation. Directors who are employed by FIL or its subsidiaries, its holding company FIL, or its subsidiaries have waived their fees for the year ended 30 April 2023. For those Directors that have not waived their fees, the remuneration earned for the year ended 30 April 2023 was in aggregate USD 360,246 subject to Shareholder approval, as set out on page 766 of this Annual Report. For comparison purposes the EUR equivalent was EUR 344,583.
7. The Directors are committed to ensuring that Shareholders are kept informed of matters relevant to their investment and that all Shareholders are treated fairly. The maintenance and integrity of information concerning the Company on the Fidelity website is the responsibility of FIL. FIMLUX is responsible for the accuracy of translations of documents which may be available to investors in languages other than English. The Directors consider and, if thought fit, approve the English form of the financial statements presented to them at the relevant Board meetings.

VIII Other Information

Proxy Voting

FFML has a policy of voting on equity securities where it is possible to do so, unless the loss of liquidity as a result of attendant share blocking is deemed to outweigh the expected benefits to be gained. Such voting is undertaken in accordance with written proxy voting guidelines employed by the FIL group, of which FFML is a part, and takes account of prevailing local market best practices. The Board of the Management Company reviews and adopts the proxy voting policy, activity and guidelines annually. FIL's Principles of Ownership, which summarises how FIL engages with companies in which the Company's sub-funds have invested, can be accessed from the Corporate Governance section of FIL's website (https://www.fidelityinternational.com).

Commissions and Internal crossing

FFML uses supplemental research in the course of its work for the Company and other clients provided by brokers through whom the Investment Manager executes transactions for the Company and other clients. All dealing commission paid by the Company and other clients on trades with brokers account only for the costs of executing the trade. All supplemental research used by the Investment Manager is valued and paid for separately from execution and other relationships with brokers in accordance with inducement regulations.

The Company participates in the Investment Manager's interfunding programme whereby FIL's traders, on occasion, identify situations where an account or sub-fund managed by FIL is buying the same security that another account or sub-fund is selling. If a trader can confirm that it would be in the interests of both accounts to execute a transaction between them rather than in the market then an interfund transaction is executed. These transactions amounted to USD 76,029,093 during the year under review.

Swiss investors are advised that with the exception of Sustainable Asian Equity II Fund, Asia Pacific Multi Asset Growth & Income Fund, Greater China Fund II, Greater China Multi Asset growth & Income Fund, Institutional European Larger Companies Fund, Multi Asset Target Income 2024 Fund, the Institutional Target Funds, the present sub-funds of the Company have been authorised by the Swiss Financial Market Supervisory Authority for distribution in Switzerland.

Equity Markets

Global equities rose over the 12-month period to April 2023, though gains were capped by concerns over rising inflation and interest rates. Markets fell in the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Markets recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector and intensified fears around global financial stability. However, policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks.

In terms of regions, Europe ex UK equities led gains. The UK, Japan and US stocks also recorded positive returns. Emerging markets and Pacific ex Japan were the worst performers. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology companies were among the leading gainers, while real estate and materials stocks were the key decliners.

European equities rose. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation and the geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained headwinds. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of some US based banks as well as the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results.

UK equities gained, despite a slew of challenges including rising inflationary pressures and lack of progress in the Russia-Ukraine conflict. Meanwhile, the Bank of England delivered 11 consecutive interest rate hikes, taking its policy rate to 4.25% in March, the highest level since 2008 in order to bring down high inflation. The UK was also faced with a sell-off in equities in September following a failed mini-budget by the then-government led by Elizabeth Truss, but subsequently recovered after new chancellor Jeremy Hunt carried out a near-complete policy U-turn in October. This positive momentum continued in early November, as tentative signs of cooling inflationary pressures in the US bolstered expectations of a slowdown in the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) monetary policy tightening cycle. However, a series of strong economic reports later in the period led to concerns that central banks may keep rates elevated for longer than expected. Volatility returned in March due to the turmoil in the banking sector, which ignited concerns around the stability of the financial system.

US equities rose over the 12-months under review. The period started on a negative note, as Russia's continued conflict with Ukraine raised the cost of essential commodities. The passage of the CHIPS ACT and the Inflation Reduction Act in the third quarter supported markets. 2023 started on a strong note after the Consumer Price Index eased, strengthening the case for a smaller rate hike by the US Fed. Equities advanced in March despite the volatility, as easing fears of a contagion from the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US supported sentiment. Investors also reacted positively to early first quarter earnings results.

Japanese equities rose over the period. However, share price gains were capped as concerns over broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates weighed on stock prices. Faced with escalating price pressures, the US Fed responded with a series of interest rate hikes, which saw the yen weaken sharply against the US dollar. This prompted Japan's Ministry of Finance to intervene in the currency market in September, for the first time since 1998. Earlier in the period, share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments. Signs of a peak in US inflation, as well as expectations for a recovery in the Chinese economy, also helped to improve sentiment. However, the US Fed's more hawkish stance and the Bank of Japan's unexpected decision to adjust its yield curve control policy in the latter half of the period drove a sharp decline in share prices.

Equities in the Pacific ex Japan region slid. Notwithstanding recent marginal improvements, inflationary pressure remained high across most global markets, driving major central banks to announce multiple rate hikes. This continued to undermine investor sentiment amid increasing recessionary fears. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to regional market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and the ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China. Against this backdrop, Chinese equities slid sharply. Australian stocks also retreated but outperformed the broader market.

Emerging markets declined sharply, due to various factors including ongoing geopolitical tensions, the continued impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and rising inflation. Markets were weighed down as the US Fed signalled tighter financial conditions before moving decisively to raise rates to tame inflation. Emerging market central banks also moved early and aggressively to tighten their monetary policies, having noted that inflation was rising substantially above their respective targets, exacerbated by the war in Ukraine, which led to a spike in food and energy prices. Markets strengthened somewhat in the second half of the review period, supported by the economic reopening in China, although a more risk-off environment emerged in March, due to the turmoil in the developed market banking sector.

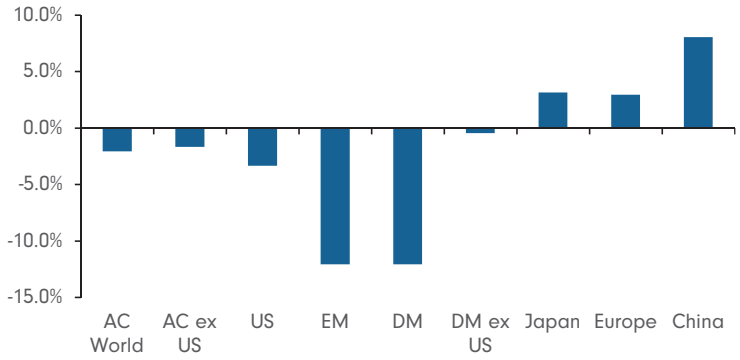
Tightening credit conditions and softening demand likely to weigh on earnings growth



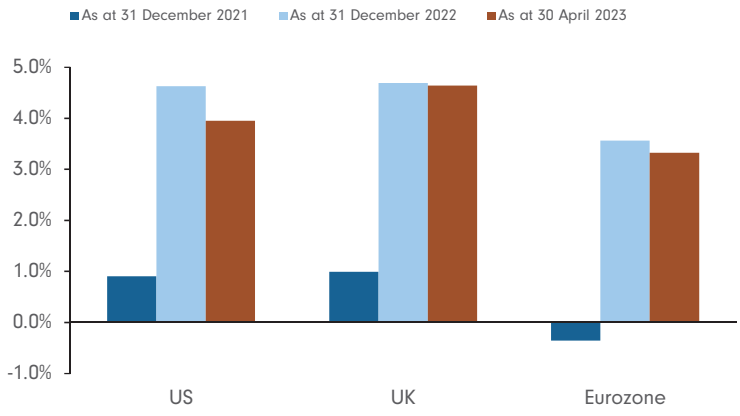
Source: IBES, Refinitiv DataStream, 30.04.2023
Data for MSCI Indices

Overall, we remain cautious on global equities and anticipate increasing volatility as top-line pressures worsen in the coming months in light of the rise in labour and financing costs and the weakness in other cyclical indicators. Earnings expectations have begun to decline, and more companies will likely experience earnings downgrades in the future. In the US, the negative impact of inflation on consumer attitudes and tightening credit conditions is expected to weigh on corporate earnings, putting pressure on margins and causing them to weaken, which will ultimately impact revenue generation. In Europe, earnings expectations for FY2023 and 2024 are likely to be pressured due to a weakening demand outlook. In Japan, while the likelihood of significant negative surprises appears low, consensus forecasts have been lowered since the start of 2023 and expectations are not particularly high. In Asia, regional earnings for FY2023 remain encouraging compared to global markets. China's consumption recovery is likely to remain strong in the first half, supported by savings and potential monetary/fiscal easing.

Bond markets

Global bond markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. Energy prices in Europe declined to their lowest levels in 18 months in February 2023, but the impact on the cost of living, if any, was limited due to the lag effect. As inflation remained high, global central banks delivered rate hikes in February and March 2023. Markets turned volatile in March due to the banking sector turmoil and worries over a broader contagion across the banking system, which led to investors recalibrating the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the year-to-date period in 2023, following a dismal 2022.

Expected change in central bank policy rate one year forward·



· Source: Bloomberg, 30.04.2023

The recent market turmoil resulting from the collapse of US-based Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank, followed by Credit Suisse in Europe, led investors to lower expectations for future interest rate hikes. However, the US Fed retained its aggressive monetary policy given persistently sticky inflation and strong labour markets. The current market stress, a symptom of the size and speed of policy tightening to date, is causing wider spill overs through the bank lending channel to the real economy. While we believe this is not indicative of any systemic risk in the banking system, keeping rates higher for longer will increase pressure on financial systems. A cyclical recession over a 12-month period is still the most likely outcome, but a more severe recession would be on the cards were the US Fed to remain restrictive throughout 2023.

Performance notes on Fund Reviews

Cumulative Returns are calculated from published Net Asset Value price to published Net Asset Value price with gross income reinvested on ex-dividend dates. For sub-funds where the price adjustment policy has been applied as per note 2 on page 761, the Cumulative Returns are calculated to or from the adjusted Net Asset Value price.

This calculation does not include any initial charge, and represents the true investment performance of the sub-fund.
The performance figures reported under the column "Since Launch" in the tables are calculated from the commencement of operations until 30 April 2023.

Annualised performance is an alternative way of expressing a sub-fund's total return. It assumes a steady compound rate of growth during the period in question and is not the sub-fund's year by year performance, which fluctuated over the periods shown.
Please note that the Manager's Overviews are based on the first Share class disclosed for each sub-fund. Performance data is expressed in the Share class currency of denomination, indicated by the ISO code shown.

Manager's Overview

US equities rose over the 12-months under review. The period started on a negative note, as Russia's continued conflict with Ukraine raised the cost of essential commodities. The third quarter witnessed the passing of the CHIPS ACT and the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) by the Joe Biden Administration, which supported equities. Markets also reacted positively to third quarter earnings. 2023 started on a strong note after the Consumer Price Index (CPI) eased, strengthening the case for a smaller rate hike by the US Federal Reserve (Fed). Equities advanced in March despite the volatility, as easing fears of a contagion from the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank in the US supported sentiment. Investors also reacted positively to early first quarter earnings results. Against this backdrop, energy and industrials were the best performers, while real estate and consumer discretionary were among the biggest laggards.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Insurance company RenaissanceRe rose after its fourth quarter earnings and net interest income came in higher than expectations. The holding in pharmaceuticals company McKesson advanced after it announced its full year 2023 earnings. Its revenues were in line with analyst expectations, while its earnings exceeded estimates. The company's operating profit grew year over year, driven by increased volume of specialty products and retail national account customers. The lack of exposure to Tesla was the strongest contributor to relative performance. Its shares fell after the electric vehicle manufacturer introduced an aggressive pricing strategy, missed first quarter consensus earnings before interest and taxes (EBIT) and announced margins that were below guidance.

The position in First Republic Bank weighed on performance towards the end of the period. The collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank sparked a broader sell-off in First Republic and other regional US banks. The holding in freight railroad company Norfolk Southern declined after it released earnings that were marginally ahead of expectations, with limited guidance for 2023, flat sales and no guidance for operating revenues. CVS Health Corporation slid following weaker than expected results for the Medicare Advantage Open Enrolment Period, which indicates that industry enrolment growth is de-accelerating.

The managers bought a new position in American technical professional services firm Jacobs Solutions. The company provides engineering, technical, professional and construction services, as well as scientific and specialty consulting for a broad range of clients globally. It has an attractive valuation and operates in a relatively defensive industry with high government and reimbursable contracts. The managers sold the holding in First Republic, as the collapse of US banks increased risks to its business model. The exposure to FedEx was increased as it is a global leader in small package logistics and is the number one air cargo carrier globally. Meanwhile, positions in Barrick Gold and Becton Dickinson were sold.

Against this backdrop, energy and industrials were the best performers, while real estate and consumer discretionary were among worst biggest laggards.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Insurance company RenaissanceRe Holdings rose after its fourth quarter earnings and net interest income came in higher than expectations. The lack of exposure to Tesla was the strongest contributor to relative performance. Its shares fell after the electric vehicle manufacturer introduced an aggressive pricing strategy, missed first quarter consensus earnings before interest and taxes (EBIT) and announced margins that were below guidance. The holding in managed care provider Humana added value. The company's defensive earnings stream buoyed its shares. In addition, the improving outlook for managed care providers based on growth trends and pricing power for businesses with exposure to commercial segments aided the performance of stocks in the sub-sector.

Shares in Tyson Foods declined after it reported weaker-than-expected results for the first quarter, with earnings and revenues below analyst estimates. The company also lowered its operating margins guidance for three out of four business segments, but maintained its full-year revenue outlook. The holding in business services company Concentrix detracted from performance after it announced the acquisition of customer experiences company Webhelp. Its shares declined due to the risks introduced to the business from a large merger during an economic downturn. The overweight position in mega-cap company Microsoft contributed to relative returns. Its shares rallied after the company reported earnings that were above expectations. Microsoft's revenue growth, margins and earnings growth accelerated compared to its fourth quarter announcement.

During the period, the managers purchased a new position in biopharmaceutical company Amgen. It is a strong, defensive stock with potential upside from the acquisition of Horizon Therapeutics. The position in pharmaceuticals company Johnson & Johnson was increased. The company is expected to see growth almost every year until 2031, with no patent cliffs due to diversification. Its MedTech division is benefiting from the post-pandemic recovery and is also growing through new product launches, which are performing well. Positions in Bank OZK and NeoGames were sold.

Fidelity Funds

ASEAN Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,113 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Equities in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) remained largely flat over the period. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risks. Markets reassessed expectations for the peak level in global interest rates as inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to regional market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment. Meanwhile, ASEAN economies, led by Indonesia and Thailand, stood out, as they witnessed robust recovery in 2022.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Security selection in Singapore and Thailand weighed on returns, while holdings in some regional financials including Indonesia added value. Indonesian companies witnessed strong earnings momentum on the back of a stable macroeconomic environment and rising consumer spending. Consequently, positions in Indonesian banks, including Bank Syariah Indonesia and Bank Mandiri Persero contributed to performance. Dream International also advanced significantly after it reported robust full-year earnings and revenue growth. Not holding Delta Electronics Thai supported relative returns as investors rotated away from Thai stocks. Japfa tumbled as the market priced in the impact of the distribution and spin-off listing of its China-focused dairy business AustAsia Group in Hong Kong last year. The holding in Keppel Pacific Oak US REIT underperformed amid a rising interest rate environment and investor concerns around the US commercial real estate sector.

The manager holds businesses that are enduring franchises with sustainable competitive advantages, have a reasonable runway of future growth, attractive valuations with a good risk/reward profile, solid balance sheets and superior capital management ability. Among financials, the manager has strong conviction in regional banks including Bank Negara Indonesia and Hong Leong Bank. The fund also has conviction positions in health care names including Medikaloka Hermina, which is favoured for its high-quality private hospital chain in Indonesia. Indofood is preferred for its sustainable market leadership position, with high barriers to entry and consumer stickiness.

Asia Pacific Opportunities Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 2,239 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia Pacific ex Japan equities slid over the period. Sentiment was undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risk. Investors reassessed their expectations for the peak in global interest rates as targeted inflation remained high across most regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Security selection in the consumer discretionary and financials sectors enhanced gains. The position in private lender HDFC Bank was a key contributor to returns, as investors viewed the merger of Housing Development Finance Corporation (HDFC) with HDFC Bank as a positive move. The exposure to Focus Media Information Technology, a digital display advertiser, added value. Its clients are likely to increase their marketing spending to rebuild brand equity once business conditions normalise. Conversely, regulatory headwinds weighed on the position in building materials group Beijing Oriental Yuhong. The company is expected to gain from industry consolidation as its competitors have failed in the property downcycle, which points to improving margins. The position in fibre cement producer James Hardie Industries CDI retreated due to high inflation, a strong US dollar and housing market uncertainty.

The manager focuses on bottom-up stock selection and favours companies that have an understandable business model, an above-average earnings growth rate relative to market expectations and the ability to allocate capital effectively to increase returns on equity over time. The manager also likes companies that trade at attractive valuations. The allocation to private lender HDFC Bank was retained. It has a strong balance sheet and the best asset quality among Indian banks. The position in Samsung Electronics was also retained. It is a global leader in memory chips, handsets, display panels and consumer electronics products, and is well positioned for DRAM and NAND demand amid strong computing demand.

Fidelity Funds

Asian Smaller Companies Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,213 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Small-cap equities in the Asia ex Japan region declined during the stated period. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risks. Markets reassessed expectations for the peak level in global interest rates as inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to regional market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China. The manager continues to focus on fundamental analysis and believes that investing in good businesses run by competent and honest management teams at attractive prices is the most time-tested way to make money in the stock market.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. Stock selection was the primary driver of returns, with sector and regional positioning also adding value. The fund is managed with a value/quality style in the Asian small-caps space. Value names outperformed growth stocks in the first half of 2022, as the market rotated away from growth names and into value stocks, which favoured the fund's performance. There have been no major mistakes or errors of commission (where the fund lost a lot of money in stocks that were held) over the period. Although holdings in Japfa, China Yongda and Shine Justice detracted from returns, these were temporary losses. The fall in their share prices increased the margin of safety and the manager increased the exposure to all three of these companies. Meanwhile, holdings in Indofood CBP Sukses Makmur, Bank Mandiri, Dream International, and KEI Industries performed well in line with the strong market performance in those countries. These businesses have been retained in the portfolio as they continue to offer a sufficient margin of safety despite their recent gains.

The manager looks for companies with strong competitive advantages and good management teams. The focus is on discovering undervalued stocks, leading to a significant share of funds being invested in small and mid-cap companies. The fund avoids unproven business models, highly geared companies, cyclical businesses on peak margins and stocks trading on high earnings or cash flow multiples. There were no major changes to the fund's overall positioning at the country and sector level, except for adjustments driven by stock-specific opportunities.

Asian Special Situations Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 2,036 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia ex Japan equities declined over the year. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risks. Markets reassessed expectations for the peak level in global interest rates as inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to regional market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. The active allocation to the financial sector proved rewarding in a rising interest rate environment. Holdings in best-in-class Asian private banks contributed to performance. Some of the notable positions include Indonesian and Indian banks such as Bank Central Asia, ICICI Bank, HDFC Bank and Axis Bank. Within the Chinese consumption space, Trip.Com and Galaxy Entertainment added value amid hopes of a recovery in China. Conversely, some holdings in the information technology (IT) sector detracted from performance. For instance, VisEra Technologies and SK Hynix weighed on returns as weakening demand pressure weighed on these stocks. Meanwhile, Naver's operating margins were subdued by the deceleration of core advertisement and e-commerce revenue growth, as well as higher labour and marketing costs in South Korea.

The portfolio has an emphasis on high-quality companies that are supported by strong management teams, have built strong franchises, and are well positioned to both drive and benefit from structural growth prospects in the region. Among financials, the manager has strong conviction in HDFC Bank, AIA Group and Axis Bank. Samsung Electronics, a global leader in memory chips, handsets, display panels and consumer electronics products, is another conviction holding in the portfolio. Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing, the largest absolute position in the fund, is retained as it remains a front-runner with cutting edge technology.

Fidelity Funds

Australian Diversified Equity Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : AUD 678 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Australian equities advanced over the period. Positive investor sentiment associated with improving corporate results, low energy prices and China's reopening supported market performance. Nearly all sectors advanced, with energy, health care and information technology (IT) among the best performers, while real estate and financials lagged the market.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the review period. Security selection in the industrials and energy sectors held back gains. Shares in Domino's Pizza Enterprises slid amid a challenging macroeconomic environment and a tight labour market. However, its financial year 2022 results indicated a reacceleration in sales growth, driven by franchise stores. It has an established track record of leadership in digital innovation and delivery, which is expected to drive future growth. The holding in New Zealand-based dairy processor Synlait Milk declined. Its shares were hurt due to slower than expected demand for milk. The rolling impact from China's declining birth rate indicated weaker near-term demand for its infant formula. On a positive note, the position in fast-fashion jewellery retailer Lovisa Holdings added value. Lovisa has developed a vertically integrated business model that can respond quickly to changing accessory trends and offers a broad product range with high margins. Its management team continues to exercise discipline around store locations and rent economics, which drive its profitability and liquidity.

The fund aims to achieve income and long-term capital growth primarily through investments in Australian equities, corporate debt instruments and derivatives. The managers focus on finding large and medium-sized companies, but they may also invest in smaller firms that meet their investment criteria. They remain mindful of company fundamentals and focus on the experience and competence of management teams. The strategy favours high-quality companies with a sustainable competitive edge, strong free cash flow generation and robust earnings growth. The high-conviction position in Pinnacle Investment Management offers a long runway for growth as it adds affiliates and increases offshore distribution to support continued high net inflows.

China Consumer Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 4,266 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The Chinese equity market fell over the one-year period due to multiple factors, including quicker-than-expected interest rate hikes by the US Federal Reserve (Fed) and its implications on Chinese equities; and lockdowns in China in 2022 as it struggled to contain the outbreak of COVID-19. The Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant surge in commodity and oil prices; and lingering weakness in the Chinese housing market and the controversies around the country's zero COVID-19 policy also weighed on equities. Moreover, market sentiment remained weak as investors reassessed the pace of consumption recovery in the country following the relaxation of COVID-19 restrictions and intensifying geopolitical concerns.

The fund underperformed the index over the period. Security selection in the consumer staples sector weighed on returns, while an underweight allocation to financials supported performance. At a stock level, the exposure to China Mengniu Dairy detracted from returns due to weak guidance and execution by its management, which raised concerns over its growth outlook. The holding in Shenzhou International Group Holdings held back gains. The stock was negatively impacted by heightened fears of a global recession and a slowdown in its business. The position in Bilibili hampered performance as it faced delays in gaming licenses due to Beijing's tightened regulations on the gaming industry. Conversely, the conviction position in AIA Group supported returns as it reported strong value of new business and exceptional growth across geographies. Within consumer discretionary, the exposure to Trip.com and Galaxy Entertainment Group added value. Both stocks were regarded as key beneficiaries of the general macroeconomic recovery in the early months of 2023.

The robust recovery in China has continued to gain traction and is likely to release further pent-up demand in the consumer space. China remains on track to offer attractive risk-reward opportunities as it is in a better place in the near-term given its relatively healthy economy. Consumer-driven growth has advanced as Chinese authorities have released supportive policies. Therefore, Meituan (B), Alibaba Group Holding (CN) and JD.com (A) are key positions in the portfolio. Within consumer staples, Kweichow Moutai (A) is held as it exhibits a solid brand position and a dominant market share in the high-end baijiu sector.

Fidelity Funds

China Focus Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 3,570 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equity markets reported subdued performance over the 12 months ended April 2023. Stringent zero-COVID-19 restrictions and a prolonged property downturn over most of the period took a toll on Chinese equities, which recouped some losses following an earlier than anticipated reopening at the tail end of 2022. This market-friendly shift, combined with supportive policies in the credit market and the property sector, led to a broad-based rally and renewed investor interest in anticipation of a strong consumption-led recovery. However, market sentiment turned weaker towards the latter part of the period, due to patchy macroeconomic data, which led to concerns over the pace and sustainability of China's recovery. Intensifying geopolitical tensions with the US further weighed on investor sentiment.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. Within the Chinese consumption space, the underweight stance in e-commerce giants including JD.Com and Meituan contributed to relative returns. In addition to geopolitical turmoil, investors remained concerned due to intensifying competition in the Chinese e-commerce space, which led to a selling spree in the industry in the first quarter of 2023. Meanwhile, the allocation to energy stocks added relative value. Shares in PetroChina (H) and Sinopec gained as the increasing supply-demand mismatch due to the global oil supply shortage and growing emerging market demand propelled oil prices, which boosted oil companies. Conversely, an underweight allocation to Chinese insurance companies given the manager's low conviction in the industry held back some gains. Insurers such as Ping An Insurance advanced, reflecting a recovery in the Chinese life insurance industry. Shares in Chinese automobile dealer Zhongsheng Group slid due to weakening automobile demand in China and intensifying price wars.

Nitin Bajaj took over the management of the fund effective 30 September 2022, following which he made some significant positioning changes in terms of sector allocation. However, the fund's value-oriented style remains firmly in place. More importantly, the manager will continue to focus on bottom-up stock selection with a value-focused approach by utilising Fidelity's proprietary research and analysis. Overall, the manager believes that the quality of businesses and valuations will bring in consistent returns over time.

Fidelity Funds

China Innovation Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 132 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the period. The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in a widespread lockdown, weighing on domestic economic activity. Later, a mortgage boycott rekindled worries over the real estate sector and rising default risk at banks. US-China tensions escalated during the period after the US tightened restrictions on the biomanufacturing and semiconductor space and put a few US-listed Chinese firms under delisting risk. In order to shore up the economy, Chinese authorities announced multiple stimulus measures, including an easing monetary policy and favourable policy shifts for internet, gaming and real estate companies. Furthermore, China fully reopened its borders in 2023, which provided an improving outlook for the economic recovery.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period, mainly due to stock selection within the financials, energy and health care sectors. Property management service provider Greentown Service Group declined amid the broad-based weakness in the real estate sector. E-commerce giant JD.Com (A) slid due to concerns over intense competition within the industry, as domestic consumption was weakened by COVID-19. Data centre operator GDS Holdings fell amid weaker cloud demand, slower move-ins, higher power tariffs and a tougher funding environment. Conversely, the position in online travel agency Trip.com Group proved rewarding as travel recovered alongside easing mobility restrictions.

The managers take a thematic approach to fundamental, bottom-up investment, looking for innovative firms focused on growth and quality at a reasonable price. Seeking to capitalise on the acceleration of innovation in China, they apply a deep understanding of the technological, lifestyle and environmental innovations that are reshaping the world to identify underappreciated growth opportunities. Environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations are integrated in the investment process. As a result, the fund is overweight in the information technology and industrials sectors.

Fidelity Funds

Emerging Asia Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 514 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging Asian equities declined over the year. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risk. Markets reassessed their expectations for the peak level in global interest rates as targeted inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to regional market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. The active allocation to the financial sector proved rewarding in a rising interest rate environment. Holdings in best-in-class Asian private banks contributed to performance. For instance, positions in Indonesian and Indian banks, including HDFC Bank, Housing Development Fin Corp, Bank Mandiri and Axis Bank enhanced gains. The holding in Zhongsheng Group slid due to weakening automobile demand in China and intensifying price wars. Shares in Mobile World retreated as investors remained cautious about near-term mass consumption spending in Vietnam; however, the company offers a long runway of growth prospects.

The manager favours businesses that are enduring franchises with sustainable competitive advantages, have a reasonable runway of future growth, attractive valuations with a good risk/reward profile, solid balance sheets and superior capital management ability. Among financials, the manager has strong conviction in ICICI Bank and Axis Bank. China Yongda Automobiles is also favoured for its attractive prospects with additional upside potential on returns on equity through its expansion into new energy vehicle brands.

Emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 245 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Equities in the emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) region fell over the period. The Russia-Ukraine war rattled the financial market, as did surging inflation, central bank tightening and heightened nervousness over the outlook for global growth. Nonetheless, equities in the region stabilised in recent months and registered positive performance over the year-to-date period. From a sector perspective, financials, communication services and materials were the leading laggards, while information technology (IT) and consumer discretionary were among the best performers. From a style perspective, growth names outperformed their value counterparts, though both ended in negative territory.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. At the country level, strong security selection in Kazakhstan contributed to returns. At the sector level, robust stock picking in financials added value. Here, Kaspi KZ GDR, Piraeus Financial Holdings and Erste enhanced gains, despite weakness in the sector. Conversely, mining companies Jubilee Metals, Alphamin Res and Sibanye-Stillwater were negatively impacted by the overall weakness in the sector.

The managers follow a bottom-up stock picking approach, as a result of which the fund's country and sector positioning reflects the number of attractive investment opportunities available. They continue to favour commodities such as aluminium, copper and tin, which have a long-term demand tailwind, as opposed to iron ore. The fund has exposure to Canada-listed First Quantum Minerals. It is a copper miner with core assets in Zambia. The managers also favour Glencore, a diversified natural resource company that produces and markets commodities. Within financials, they hold Erste, Komercni, Absa Group and FirstRand. These banks have been successful in translating higher rates into higher earnings and offer 7–9% dividend yields, which is likely to support their prices when the US Federal Reserve reverses its monetary policy trend. Kazakhstan's Kaspi KZ GDR is the largest absolute position in the fund as its fundamental outlook remains robust.

Emerging Markets Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 3,551 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging markets declined over the review period, amid ongoing geopolitical tensions, the continued impact of COVID-19 induced lockdowns in China and high global inflation. Markets were weighed down as the US Federal Reserve (Fed) signalled tighter financial conditions before moving decisively to raise rates to tame inflation. Emerging market central banks also moved early and aggressively to tighten their monetary policies, having noted that inflation was rising substantially above their respective targets, exacerbated by the war in Ukraine. Markets strengthened somewhat in the second half of the review period, supported by China's economic reopening and an easing regulatory stance towards the internet and property sectors, while a more risk-off environment emerged from March, in response to the geopolitical and regulatory developments in China and turmoil in the developed market banking sector.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Losses from China, Brazil and South Korea were partially offset by gains from India and Kazakhstan. At the sector level, stock picking within consumer staples and information technology (IT) hampered returns, but proved rewarding in the financials sector. Holdings operating in industries related to the Chinese property sector, such as Beijing Oriental Yuhong, were weak. Zhongsheng Group pulled back on concerns over consumer price sensitivity and diminished buying power. Financial holdings HDFC Bank and Kaspi KZ GDR were favoured for consistently reporting upbeat results over the year.

Global equities remain susceptible to a high level of macroeconomic uncertainty over the future path of the global economy and interest rates. Emerging markets still present compelling opportunities and the relative attractiveness of valuations compared to developed markets, particularly the US, creates good opportunities for strong returns from emerging market stocks over the long term. The fund owns well capitalised businesses with under-levered balance sheets, while being conservatively positioned in what will remain a challenging environment.

Fidelity Funds

Euro STOXX 50® Fund [2]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 273 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12-month period. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

As a "passive" or "index tracker" fund, the fund is managed to provide returns that are as close as possible to that of the index, which is a concentrated index of the 50 largest companies in the eurozone. However, the fund incurs costs and expenses that the index does not incur - although it can benefit from securities lending when the index cannot. This means that the fund's returns should be similar to the index, rather than identical. Over the period, the primary A-EUR class of the fund returned 18.4% in net euro terms, while the index returned 17.8%. Taxation was a positive source of tracking difference, where the fund's withholding tax treatment is more favourable versus the net total return index. Over the period, the same class' ex-post tracking error averaged 0.48% (a 3- year annualised figure, based on 36 month-end data points, is used as it is regarded as more statistically valid). This measure of the variability of fund returns around the index can be influenced by a number of factors, including the aforementioned withholding tax differences, and the fund's partial swing pricing policy, which is designed to manage tracking difference as tightly as possible over time.

Geode Capital Management LLC, a leading specialist in the management of index tracking strategies, was appointed as the sub-investment manager to the fund on 3 January 2017. The managers endeavour to minimise deviation from the index by using an index tracking technique, which comprises full replication of the companies represented in the index. Please note, the fund's cash position, and investment of cash into a liquidity fund for diversification, does not mean that the fund is under exposed to the index, as such positions are typically equitised with equity index futures contracts. This helps to efficiently manage cashflows in the fund at reduced costs. When taking into account exposure achieved by these futures contracts, the fund's holdings weights more closely match the index.

Fidelity Funds

European Dynamic Growth Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 3,113 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose (in USD terms) over the 12-months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund delivered positive returns but underperformed the index over the period. While the fund faced some style and sector selection headwinds such as the overweight exposure to industrials and the underweight stance in financials, strong stock picking across sectors (notably in health care and consumer staples) added value. At a stock level, Novo-Nordisk (B) (DK) was the largest contributor to performance. The company benefited from earnings upgrades and strong results through 2022, and positive guidance for FY2023. Shares in Swedish Match gained after the company received a takeover bid from Philip Morris International in May 2022. Conversely, Teleperformance was the leading detractor from returns. Its shares fell sharply on reports of a potential investigation by Colombia's Labor Ministry into the work environment in its Colombian content moderation subsidiary.

The team prefers companies that benefit from structural growth drivers rather than those that rely on external, cyclical drivers of growth. These businesses tend to be in industries with high barriers to entry, have strong balance sheets and robust cash flow generation, and are able to multiply their intrinsic value through growth. At a sector level, the fund is overweight in stock picking sectors such as technology, industrials and health care, and has a lack of exposure to macroeconomically sensitive sectors such as automobiles, banks and energy.

Fidelity Funds

European Growth Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 6,467 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12 months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund generated positive returns but underperformed the index over the period, with sector and style headwinds proving a drag on relative returns. Weak stock selection in the health care sector hampered performance. Fresenius Medical Care was a notable detractor from returns. The company reported strong FY 2022 results in February, but downgraded its outlook for FY 2023. Not holding Novo-Nordisk also held back relative gains. The position in German residential company Vonovia was the biggest detractor from performance at the stock level, due to concerns over its debt levels in a rising interest rate environment. Some of these losses were offset by the exposure to Inditex. Its shares rose on the back of strong FY22 results in March, despite a slowdown in top-line results in the fourth quarter of 2022.

The team prefers quality companies that are trading on attractive valuations. The fund typically does well when the valuation gap between the most and least expensive stocks narrows, given that it tends not to own the most expensive companies in the market. The portfolio is overweight in consumer staples, which is the largest sector exposure on both an absolute and relative basis. This is a function of the sector having numerous good quality businesses, some of which are close to multi-year low valuations due to fears over input cost inflation. The team is watching for opportunities that have significant mid-term potential, but are being negatively impacted by short-term worries.

Fidelity Funds

European Low Volatility Equity Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12-months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. The underweight stance in the consumer discretionary sector detracted from relative performance, while stock selection in communication services also held back gains. On a positive note, security selection in the consumer staples and materials sectors added value. The lack of exposure to pharmaceuticals group Novo Nordisk weighed on relative returns. Its shares rose after it reported positive guidance for FY2023 in February. News that its best-selling diabetes treatment drug Ozempic was back on shelves in the US after several months of demand outstripping supply further supported the stock. The underweight stance in luxury conglomerate LVMH also detracted from relative performance as its shares rallied, buoyed by higher sales and strong performance across segments during the year. The broadly in line position in tobacco group Swedish Match contributed to returns after it received a takeover bid from Philip Morris International in May 2022.

The Fidelity European Low Volatility Equity Fund seeks to offer investors a differentiated source of risk-adjusted returns. It gives exposure to the breadth of Fidelity's proprietary fundamental and sustainable research through a portfolio of securities that our experienced research team view as fundamentally attractive. The portfolio managers use advanced portfolio construction techniques to build a relatively unconstrained strategy that aims to achieve long-term capital growth, principally through investments in European equities. The fund seeks an overall volatility profile that is lower than the MSCI Europe Index, typically a 20–30% reduction. In addition, environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations are integrated within the investment process.

Fidelity Funds

European Smaller Companies Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 1,062 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European smaller equities rose (in USD terms) over the 12 months under review, but registered negative returns in euro terms. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund outperformed the index during the review period, driven by positive security selection and favourable sector positioning. At a sector level, the large underweight stance in real estate, coupled with strong stock picking in the industrials and consumer driven sectors supported returns. Within industrials, Balfour Beatty performed well after it reported strong results for the first half of 2022, while Uponor rose after rival business Aliaxis made an unsolicited offer to acquire the company. However, Uponor later rejected the deal on grounds that it did not fairly value the company's long-term growth prospects. Conversely, the overweight positioning in the financials and communication services sectors held back gains. Media business Future Plc was the biggest stock specific detractor from performance. Its shares derated in FY22, amid concerns over the state of digital advertising markets due to weaker consumer sentiment.

The managers are focussed on identifying well-managed, cash generative companies that have clear market leadership, a sustainable competitive advantage and profits driven by strong sales growth. The fund displays higher growth in sales and earnings, better balance sheet characteristics and trades at slightly higher multiples than the index, reflecting the bias towards quality growth stocks. The fund has meaningful overweight positions in the materials, communication services and financials sectors, while being underweight in industrials and real estate.

Fidelity Funds

FIRST All Country World Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 447 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose over the 12-month period to April 2023, though gains were capped by concerns over rising inflation and interest rates. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. In terms of regions, Europe ex UK equities led gains as positive economic surprises and encouraging earnings supported a rebound towards the latter part of the period. UK, Japan and US stocks also recorded positive returns. Emerging markets and Pacific ex Japan were the worst performers. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology companies were among the leading gainers, while real estate and materials stocks were the key decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Selected positions in speciality retail and communications equipment were key detractors from performance. On a positive note, strong security selection in the insurance and oil, gas and consumable fuels sectors added value. The position in American full-service commercial bank Signature Bank weighed heavily on returns as it was shut down by federal regulators on 12 March 2023. The bank's failure resulted from regulator concerns as depositors withdrew large amounts of money after the failure of Silicon Valley Bank and worries over continued contagion. The holding in American business services company Concentrix underperformed on concerns over whether Chat GPT/large language models can pose a competitive technology disruption risk to the business process outsourcing business model. On a positive note, the holding in RenaissanceRe, a global provider of reinsurance and insurance, advanced on the back of solid annual results. Investor sentiment was also buoyed as the company's management confirmed that it has the capacity to deploy and grow in an insurance hard market. RenaissanceRe has a positive outlook given its strong reserves and limited exposure to areas of the insurance market that are experiencing claims inflation. Within energy, the position in oil refiner Marathon Petroleum rose after its annual earnings beat expectations. The company also increased its share buyback programme. The lack of exposure to Tesla contributed to relative returns. Its shares fell over investor concerns that Twitter will take much of CEO Elon Musk's time now that he is the social network's owner and CEO. The company also reported a sharp decline in earnings in the first half of 2023, with revenues missing consensus estimates. Profit margins for the global electric vehicle giant also fell substantially given its aggressive price-slashing strategy.

The managers continue to focus on the highest conviction and most relevant ideas generated by Fidelity's global analyst base. By mitigating unintended risks, they ensure that stock selection is the key driver of risks and returns. Portfolio positioning is therefore a result of their bottom-up stock selection process.

Fidelity Funds

Germany Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 743 MILLION

Manager's Overview

German equities rose over the period. Initially, increasing concerns around inflation led to volatile swings and significant sector and style rotations across global markets. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise in early 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In addition, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

While the fund delivered positive absolute returns, it underperformed the index over the review period. Sector allocation was a large headwind, with the fund's more defensive stance in light of the Russia-Ukraine crisis proving detrimental to returns. The upswing in cyclical sectors was stronger than expected, while the overweight exposure to health care fared poorly. In this context, laboratory equipment maker Sartorius Stedim Biotech was notably weak after its parent company flagged concerns around the normalisation of order patterns and the easing of COVID-19 vaccine sales. Bayer also underperformed over mounting pressure on earnings due to declining glyphosate prices, cost inflation and the potential for future litigation. On a positive note, the position in MTU Aero Engines, a manufacturer of military aircraft engines, performed strongly on expectations of a recovery in flight demand, particularly in China.

As interest rate expectations and bond yields stabilise, the growth and pay-out profiles of quality growth businesses should come to the fore again, benefiting the fund's strategy of favouring such companies. The prevailing market volatility has provided the manager with interesting investment opportunities as well as reasons to adjust the portfolio's positioning somewhat. Meanwhile, the fund continues to have significant exposure to sectors such as health care, software, insurance and technology.

Fidelity Funds

Global Financial Services Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 1,612 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The financials sector declined over the review period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. At a sector level, insurance providers were the leading performers.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. At a sub-sector level, insurance service providers added value, while selected banks came under pressure in a period of heightened market volatility. At a stock level, Arch Capital Group outperformed, driven by strong delivery on the back of interest rates and price hikes, new business growth and attractive valuation. Kinsale Capital Group rallied in light of its strong quarterly earnings, which beat market expectations. Conversely, SVB Financial Group collapsed due to a bank-run on its deposits by clients amid liquidity concerns. This resulted in markets experiencing a depositor-led confidence crisis, which led to the bank's sudden collapse. As a result, contagion fears in the wider banking sector weighed on the holdings in other regional banks, namely Western Alliance and Comerica.

The fund remains well diversified and continues to invest in long-term winners, quality franchises with robust return potential and strong bottom-up drivers. Although the fund is structurally underweight in banks, the focus remains on investing in resilient, well-capitalised names that will benefit from interest rate hikes and strong lending growth. In the insurance space, property & casualty (P&C) insurers benefit from favourable pricing trends in an inflationary environment, higher interest rates through security portfolios, and a resilient, low beta defensive business model. Wealth managers with strong asset gathering franchises are also witnessing disproportionately faster growth in wealth and economic value creation at higher-end income groups.

Global Focus Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 807 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced (in USD terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer, tracking crude oil prices higher after the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies (OPEC+) unexpectedly announced production cuts of more than 1 million barrels per day, aimed at stabilising oil prices at around USD 80 a barrel. Meanwhile, materials was among the notable laggards.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. While consumer discretionary holdings weighed on returns, financials names buoyed performance. At a stock level, certain growth stocks such as Amazon.com and Alphabet (A) fell, underscoring the growing pressure on digital ad spending, revenue growth and rising labour costs. Shares in e-commerce and payment services player Alibaba Group Holding detracted from returns. The underweight stance in Apple also held back relative gains. Its shares rose amid expectations that it would move into the rapidly expanding augmented reality arena. Conversely, the lack of exposure to Tesla contributed to performance, as the stock declined following disappointing quarterly earnings and subdued margins. General Electric reported stronger than expected quarterly earnings, due to robust orders in ultrasound and imaging. Arthur J Gallaghar outperformed in light of its strong top-line revenue growth and positive momentum in new businesses.

The fund invests in two categories of stocks – compounders and transformers. Holdings in the compounders category typically have defensive characteristics, enjoy some pricing power and/or have secular growth opportunities. Transformers are businesses that are either witnessing high cyclical growth or are special situations. At a sector level, the fund maintains a significant overweight in high quality businesses within the financials sector, which stands to benefit from interest rate hikes, a strengthening regulatory backdrop, secular growth drivers and the potential for market penetration, especially in emerging markets. At a stock level, Google's parent company Alphabet is the top active position in the portfolio.

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced (in USD terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style factor preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. Shares in aerospace and defence company Rolls-Royce Holdings rallied after it announced stronger than expected results for the second half of 2022, driven by the outperformance in its aerospace division, defence, new markets and non-core segments. The position in US multinational conglomerate General Electric (US) added value. Its shares rose after it revealed better than expected free cash flows, while also announcing earnings and revenues that were in line with analyst expectations. Within the materials sector Lundin Gold rallied as it announced positive drilling results from its Fruta del Norte gold mine in Ecuador. The company also generated good cash flow, allowing for a modest dividend programme.

The holding in capital goods company Stanley Black & Decker weighed on returns. The company is transforming to become more innovative under its new CEO, which should boost revenue growth, free cash flow generation and strengthen its balance sheet. The business offers an attractive turnaround story; while the current economic backdrop offers some challenges, the manager is confident on its execution capabilities. The position in defence contractor L3Harris Technologies fell due to supply chain challenges. On a positive note, recent US investments support an acceleration in organic growth into 2023/2024 against the backdrop of slowing GDP growth. The company is looking to improve growth and visibility by increasing its scale to become more competitive and shift into higher growth long cycle verticals. Shares in gold producer Barrick Gold declined after it missed its earnings and free cash flow, and reduced its dividend. Nonetheless, we retain the overweight position as the gold miner has diverse assets with long life and a stable production profile.

The portfolio manager continues to invest in companies that match his core investment philosophy and holds good businesses with robust balance sheets run by strong management teams at reasonable valuations. The fund has exposure to key long-term themes in automation, reshoring, decarbonisation & electrification, clean energy, digitisation, the reopening of the economy and global middle-class travel. The fund's broad positioning remains the same, with key exposure to aerospace & defence, North American rails, selected materials names based on company-specific factors and industrial distributors.

Global Low Volatility Equity Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 35 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose over the 12-month period to April 2023, though gains were capped by concerns over rising inflation and interest rates. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. In terms of regions, Europe ex UK equities led gains as positive economic surprises and encouraging earnings supported a rebound towards the latter part of the period. UK, Japan and US stocks also recorded positive returns. Emerging markets and Pacific ex Japan were the worst performers. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology (IT) companies were among the leading gainers, while real estate and materials stocks were the key decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. The underweight stance in the IT sector and stock selection in materials weighed on relative returns, while security selection in the health care sector added value. The lack of exposure to semiconductor group Nvidia and the underweight stance in high quality market favourites such as Apple and Microsoft, where the earnings outlook remains favourable, hampered relative performance. The position in CF Industries, a US manufacturer and distributor of agricultural fertilizers, also detracted from returns. Investors were concerned about its earnings as supply was negatively impacted by higher global energy costs, leading to lower global operating rates and geopolitical factors that disrupted the global fertilizer supply chain. The underweight stance in e-commerce major Amazon added relative value as its shares fell after it projected that sales for the fourth quarter would be far below expectations. Not holding electric vehicle manufacturer Tesla also supported relative performance. Its shares fell on investor concerns that Twitter is taking much of CEO Elon Musk's time now that he is the social network's owner and CEO.

The Global Low Volatility Strategy is a defensive equity strategy that is managed to exhibit lower volatility than the broader market. The portfolio retains a bias towards lower volatility stocks and maintains a fairly defensive posture. The fund continues to maintain significant exposure to fundamentally buy-rated stocks, while seeking to minimize absolute risk with an expectation of achieving 60–80% of the volatility of the MSCI World Index over the long term.

Fidelity Funds

Global Technology Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 14,345 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Stock selection in the semiconductors & semiconductor equipment and communications equipment segments held back gains, but added value in the entertainment and software industries. The lack of exposure to semiconductor group Nvidia and the underweight stance in high quality market favourites such as Apple and Microsoft, where earnings outlooks remain favourable, weighed on relative performance. The holding in telecommunications equipment major Ericsson fell after it reported lower than expected fourth-quarter earnings as sales of fifth-generation (5G) equipment slowed in high-margin markets such as the US. Ericsson has already announced plans to cut costs amid the weakening macroeconomic environment, the effect of which is expected to emerge in the second quarter. On a positive note, the holding in aerospace & defence group Rolls-Royce Holdings contributed to returns as it delivered a debt reduction and revenue increase in 2022. The outlook for 2023 appears strong, and is underpinned by a solid recovery in flight hours to 80–90% of pre-crisis levels, following a strong start to the year.

The portfolio manager continues to employ a fundamental, bottom-up approach, and focuses on structural technological developments to identify companies that are well positioned to capitalise on some opportunities in the sector, such as cloud, e-commerce and artificial intelligence. These are the long-term growth drivers and stocks that are misunderstood by the market for some reason and trading at attractive valuations.

Fidelity Funds

Global Thematic Opportunities Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,762 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities ended the review period higher. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. The Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on equities. Markets rebounded in the second half, as easing inflation and slowing growth raised hopes that major central banks will pursue less restrictive policies. That said, volatility persisted as central banks retained their hawkish stance due to higher than target inflation. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets also worried investors. Against this backdrop, Europe ex UK equities rose strongly, as positive economic surprises supported a rebound in the latter part of the period. UK, Japan and US stocks also advanced. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology were among the leading gainers.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. The Sustainable Climate Solutions strategy was the key detractor from performance. Another strategy focused on consumption-oriented companies in China weighed on returns amid COVID-19 related challenges and an uneven economic recovery. Meanwhile, the exposure to the global technology strategy supported performance.

The portfolio aims to achieve long-term capital growth and invests in equities that may benefit from structural or secular changes in economic and social factors. These can include themes such as disruptive technologies, demographic shifts and climate change. Over the year, the managers added to the global health care strategy, as the sector is less sensitive to a slowing economic backdrop. A new clean energy strategy was purchased in view of rising demand for environment friendly energy sources. Meanwhile, the exposure to the global technology strategy was reduced on account of profit taking. The China consumer strategy was sold in 2022 amid caution towards consumer spending, but was reintroduced in 2023 after China relaxed its COVID-19 related curbs.

Greater China Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 771 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the period. The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in a widespread lockdown, weighing on domestic economic activity. Later, a mortgage boycott rekindled worries over the real estate sector and rising default risk at banks. US-China tensions escalated during the period after the US tightened restrictions on the biomanufacturing and semiconductor space and put a few US-listed Chinese firms under delisting risk. In order to shore up the economy, Chinese authorities announced multiple stimulus measures, including an easing monetary policy and favourable policy shifts for internet, gaming and real estate companies. Furthermore, China fully reopened its borders in 2023, which provided an improving outlook for the economic recovery.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period, mainly due to selected stocks in the consumer discretionary, financials and information technology sectors amid a weakening macroeconomic environment. An underweight position in PDD Holdings ADR hurt relative performance as its shares rose in light of rising online consumption due to COVID-19 and its competitive pricing. Printed circuit board (PCB) maker Unimicron Technology fell in line with semiconductor stocks amid weak demand for consumer electronics and high inventory. Property developer Longfor Group Holdings fell amid a broad weakness in the real estate sector. Conversely, China Merchants Energy Shipping rose on the back of solid financial results, driven by a recovery in oil-shipping markets.

The managers focus on areas that can deliver sustainable quality growth over the next three to five years. As a result of the bottom-up stock selection process, the fund has an overweight exposure to China and an underweight allocation to both Hong Kong and Taiwan. Selected consumer, innovative health care and renewable energy stocks are among the key holdings in the portfolio. Sportswear company Li Ning is preferred for its brand and product innovation. Life insurer AIA Group and dairy products manufacturer China Mengniu Dairy are other key positions in the portfolio.

Greater China Fund II [1,3,4,5,8]

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the period under review. The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in a widespread lockdown, weighing on domestic economic activity. Later, a mortgage boycott rekindled worries over the real estate sector and rising default risk at banks. US-China tensions escalated during the period after the US tightened restrictions on the biomanufacturing and semiconductor space and put a few US-listed Chinese firms under delisting risk. Fidelity Funds

Iberia Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 164 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Iberian equities, along with their European counterparts, gained (in US dollar terms) over the 12 months under review. The period began with increasing concerns around inflation, inviting a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive company results and China's continued economic reopening. Spain's consumer price inflation fell to 3.3% in March, before accelerating again in April. The eurozone economy narrowly avoided recession in the first quarter of 2023, primarily due to Southern nations including Spain, which saw its economy grow by 0.5% over the period.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period, due to negative security selection, though sector positioning added value. At a sector level, the large underweight stance in financials was the biggest detractor from relative performance. Specifically, the significant underweight in Banco Bilbao Vizcaya Argentaria coupled with the lack of exposure to Banco Santander and overweight position in Bankinter were the major sources of weakness. The managers remain underweight in banks, due to uncertainty over how much the rate hikes will translate into profit growth. Conversely, stock picking in the consumer discretionary sector added value, with fashion retailer Inditex among the key contributors to performance. Inditex released strong full year 2022 results in March, despite a slowdown in top line results in the fourth quarter. The large underweight in communication services, particularly the lack of exposure to Telefonica, also enhanced gains.

The managers continue to focus on identifying opportunities in structural growth businesses and attractively valued consumer businesses that have encouraging long-term growth prospects and better return profiles. At a sector level, the fund retains large overweight positions in industrials, technology and consumer discretionary stocks, while remaining structurally underweight in banks and utilities.

Fidelity Funds

India Focus Fund [7,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,927 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Indian equities ended in negative territory and underperformed regional peers due to multiple factors, including heightened recession fears across the globe, volatility in interest rates and the banking crisis in the US and Europe. Moreover, towards the end of 2022, the market witnessed outflows as investors switched into Chinese equities after the country reopened following COVID-19-related lockdowns. The Indian market was also negatively impacted by a short seller's report on Adani Group, which led to a sharp fall in its shares in 2023. In order to combat inflation, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) kept the repo rate at 6.5%, after increasing it four times in a row in 2022.

The fund outperformed the index over the period. At a stock level, the overweight allocation to private sector banks enhanced gains. The conviction position in HDFC Bank supported performance as it reported a jump in net profits, buoyed by higher top-line and strong loan growth. The exposure to ICICI Bank added value. The long-term investment rationale for both these banks remains intact on the back of their well-capitalised balance sheets. Shares in several Adani Group companies experienced massive losses following the release of a research report that highlighted concerns over its debt levels. Therefore, not holding Adani Total Gas, Adani Enterprises, Adani Transmissions and Adani Green Energy contributed to relative performance. Conversely, the lack of exposure to ITC weighed on returns. It posted healthy profit estimates for the December quarter, helped by strong cigarette sales and steady demand for its packaged food. The underweight position in Housing Development Finance Corporation hurt performance as it has undergone a merger with HDFC Bank, which has increased its market share and significantly decreased competition.

The fund is positioned to benefit from India's long-term growth and structurally positive domestic consumption trends. The portfolio remains overweight in financials, particularly in the best quality private banks in India. Of note, HDFC Bank, ICICI Bank and Axis Bank are key positions in the portfolio. Within materials, the holding in UltraTech Cement is retained as it has a pan-India presence and a strong brand name.

Fidelity Funds

Indonesia Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 260 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Indonesian equities declined over the period. Markets witnessed modest foreign outflows, with investors rotating into Chinese markets after China saw a faster-than-expected reopening from COVID-19 restrictions. However, the market recovered in 2023 and Indonesia was the one of the best performers in the broader Asia Pacific region. Most sectors ended in negative territory. Information technology (IT), industrials and utilities were the key laggards, while consumer staples and health care were notable gainers.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. Security selection in the energy, communication services and financials sectors added notable value. The lack of exposure to Bank Jago enhanced relative gains as the hype around new digital banks continued to fade. The market comprehended the reality of slowing growth and rising non-performing loans (NPL), and such stocks continued to de-rate. The underweight stance in construction materials company Berkah Beton Sadaya contributed to relative returns as its shares declined during the period. Positions in oil and gas major Indo Tambangraya Megah and refined products and chemicals supplier AKR Corporindo gained on strong energy prices. Conversely, holdings in Saratoga Investama Sedaya and Bank BTPN Syriah declined. However, their risk reward profile appears to have improved and these stocks are held for their compounding potential.

The manager pursues a well-balanced approach to bottom-up stock selection, seeking to identify opportunities across various stages of the industry lifecycle (i.e., in both "growth" and "mature" industries), and regardless of the sensitivity to business cycles (i.e., in both "defensive" and "cyclical" industries). This approach is necessary in Indonesia given the limited market breadth, and provides superior investment results versus chasing a specific theme or narrow style bias. The fund is overweight in financials and Bank Negara Indonesia Persero (L) remains a core holding, as the commercial banking sector continues to see strong earnings growth supported by loan growth, high interest rates and improving asset quality.

Fidelity Funds

Italy Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 306 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Italian equities rose over the period. Initially, increasing concerns around inflation led to volatile swings and significant sector and style rotations across global markets. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise in early 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In addition, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results and China's continued economic reopening. Economic data released in April showed that Italy avoided a recession in the first quarter of 2023, with initial estimates of GDP growth of 0.5%, a stronger than expected recovery following a slight contraction at the end of last year.

The fund generated positive returns and outperformed the index over the period. Stock picking within financials and industrials was the key driver of performance, while unfavourable positioning in these sectors kept gains in check. Within financials, BFF and UniCredit were notable sources of strength, as the current interest rate environment boosted net interest income (NII). Conversely, payments business Nexi and digital services company Reply were among the notable detractors from performance. However, Nexi's acquisition of a controlling stake in Banco de Sabadell's payments business is likely to be profitable.

The market has received renewed impetus from China's re-opening and better-than-expected first quarter results. Reduced worries about energy shortages, easing supply bottlenecks and the continued resilience of the labour market should provide tailwinds. The managers look for change opportunities in Italian companies, where the market fails to see future growth potential based on short-term issues or misconceptions, but that are trading on interesting valuation multiples, with an additional focus on strong sustainable characteristics.

Japan Growth Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : JPY 15,164 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Japanese equities rose over the period. However, share price gains were capped as concerns over broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates weighed on stock prices. Worries over a potentially widespread fallout from the collapse of US-based Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, as well as troubled Swiss lender Credit Suisse, dampened investor sentiment in March 2023. Faced with escalating price pressures, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) responded with a series of interest rate hikes, which saw the yen weaken sharply against the US dollar. This prompted Japan's Ministry of Finance to intervene in the currency market in September, for the first time since 1998. Earlier in the period, share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments. Signs of a peak in US inflation as well as expectations for a recovery in the Chinese economy also helped to improve sentiment. However, the US Fed's more hawkish stance and the Bank of Japan's (BoJ) unexpected decision to adjust its yield curve control policy in the latter half of the period drove a sharp decline in share prices. At a sector level, financials, consumer staples and industrials were the leading gainers. Conversely, real estate and communication services companies were the weakest performers, although they recorded positive returns.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Holdings in technology-related companies with a secular growth story were among the standout contributors to performance. Domestic reopening plays added value and the underweight allocation to automobiles paid off. Positions in the electric appliances sector underperformed. At a stock level, Tsuburaya Fields Holdings was the top contributor to returns. The maker of pachinko slot machines announced a significant upward revision to its full-year earnings forecasts, reflecting strong sales in China. Its content and digital business, centred on the Ultraman character, is expected to make a major contribution to earnings as it expands globally. A number of reopening plays, largely in services-related industries, notably e-gift platform giftee, outperformed as earnings momentum showed signs of improvement. The recovery in earnings is likely to continue as the effects of the pandemic recede and mobility increases. Mitsui High-Tec, a leading manufacturer of motor cores used in electric vehicles, underperformed over the period. Nevertheless, the company reported a large increase in profits for the fiscal year to January 2023 and raised its mid-term earnings and capital expenditure targets.

Inflation surprises have driven market expectations for the pace of interest rate hikes by the US Fed. As economic activity weakens, however, bond yields are likely to be restrained by lower levels of growth. If the view that long-term rates have peaked gains traction, it would help to put a floor under equity markets. It would also support a bottoming out in growth stocks, and names that performed poorly in 2022 would be expected to come back quite strongly. Against this backdrop, the portfolio manager believes that early cyclicals in the semiconductor and factory automation sectors will start performing well again, especially in light of earnings disappointments as the asset class approaches the trough of the cycle.

Japan Value Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : JPY 98,162 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Japanese equities rose over the period. However, share price gains were capped as concerns over broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates weighed on stock prices. Worries over a potentially widespread fallout from the collapse of US-based Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, as well as troubled Swiss lender Credit Suisse, dampened investor sentiment in March 2023. Faced with escalating price pressures, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) responded with a series of interest rate hikes, which saw the yen weaken sharply against the US dollar. This prompted Japan's Ministry of Finance to intervene in the currency market in September, for the first time since 1998. Earlier in the period, share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments. Signs of a peak in US inflation as well as expectations for a recovery in the Chinese economy also helped to improve sentiment. However, the US Fed's more hawkish stance and the Bank of Japan's (BoJ) unexpected decision to adjust its yield curve control policy in the latter half of the period drove a sharp decline in share prices. At a sector level, financials, consumer staples and industrials were the leading gainers. Conversely, real estate and communication services companies were the weakest performers, although they recorded positive returns.

The fund recorded positive returns but underperformed the comparative index over the year. Undervalued technology-related stocks contributed to performance. Conversely, positions in pharmaceuticals companies held back gains. The BoJ's unexpected move to adjust its yield curve control policy drove gains in interest-rate sensitive financials. As the market priced in the positive impact on earnings from higher interest rates, positions in mega bank Sumitomo Mitsui Financial Group outperformed. However, the underweight stance in Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group weighed on relative returns. Holdings in technology-related cyclicals, notably semiconductor production equipment maker Tokyo Electron, added notable value. Share prices of pharmaceuticals companies lagged the broader market despite no significant change in fundamentals. This largely reflects a rotation into early cyclicals. In this environment, the holding in Nippon Shinyaku was among the key detractors from returns.

The portfolio manager follows a bottom-up stock selection approach that focuses on valuation analysis. He typically favours stocks that are undervalued relative to their balance sheet quality, cashflow and earnings growth potential. Factors such as returns on capital and the sustainability of earnings are also important. The manager continues to see opportunities among selected cyclical stocks in technology-related sectors (i.e. semiconductors and factory automation) as these stocks approach the trough of their respective cycles, as well as in companies that will benefit from the reopening in China.

Fidelity Funds

Latin America Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 374 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Latin American equities rose during the review period. A combination of surging commodity prices, attractive interest rates and compelling valuations supported the market in an otherwise volatile backdrop marred by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the US Federal Reserve's aggressive tightening measures and concerns over a global slowdown. Mexico outperformed against a backdrop of improving economic data, while Colombia and Brazil were among the key laggards. Brazil was faring well until the Presidential elections in October 2022, post which sentiment reversed on concerns over increased government intervention and fiscal spending under new President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva. From a sector perspective, real estate, industrials and energy were the best performers, while health care and consumer discretionary were laggards. From a style perspective, value and quality names outperformed their growth counterparts.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the year. At a country level, weak stock selection in Brazil and Mexico hampered performance, while robust stock picking in Peru added value. At a stock level, security selection in energy, industrials and health care detracted from performance. Here, Petrobras (energy), Volaris (industrial) and Hapvida Participacoes (health care) were among the top detractors from returns. Encouragingly, the lack of exposure to the utilities sector and robust stock picking in communication services contributed to performance. At a stock level, Southern Copper and Lundin Gold were among the top contributors to returns.

The portfolio managers follow a high-conviction, bottom-up, quality growth approach, centred on the belief that companies that exhibit strong cash generation and robust balance sheets offer the most attractive opportunities for investors over the medium to long term. Within industrials, which is the largest overweight in the portfolio, transportation stocks such as Grupo Aeroportuario DEL SUR SAB CV, Grupo Aeroportuario SAB CV, Localiza Rent a Car and Armac are among the key holdings. Among consumer discretionary names, the managers continue to favour MercadoLibre, the leading ecommerce company by market share in virtually every market in Latin America. The exposure to consumer staples is limited, as growth prospects remain sluggish. Here, the managers hold Walmart De Mexico and SLC Agricola.

Fidelity Funds

Nordic Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : SEK 4,305 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Nordic equities rose over the period. Initially, increasing concerns around inflation led to volatile swings and significant sector and style rotations across global markets. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise in early 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In addition, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

Following a strong start to the 12-month period, the fund lost ground to the comparative index in 2023 as much of the style tailwinds that worked in the fund's favour reversed course. Growth names significantly outperformed value stocks, which did not bode well for the fund's value-biased strategy. From a sector perspective, an underweight allocation to health care, particularly through a lack of exposure to index-heavyweight Novo Nordisk, detracted from relative performance. Shares in Novo Nordisk traded strongly, supported by positive expectations from investors on its product pipeline and operational performance. Selected positions within financials also came under pressure. Notably, credit management services company Intrum declined after flagging negative adjustments to third quarter earnings following the write-down of its Italian debt portfolio. On a positive note, TORM, a leading product tanker company, continued to benefit from the supply/demand imbalance for carrier vessels due to the sanctions against Russia. A ban on the import of all Russian refined oil products in early February caused a further spike in freight rates. Similarly, benign tanker rates drove stronger-than-expected quarterly results for industrial transportation companies Okeanis Eco Tankers and Stolt-Nielsen.

Beyond the current turmoil in markets, the economic environment clearly calls for a value approach, which focuses on companies with little debt and a proven track record of earnings growth. The fund continues to have significant exposure to sectors such as energy, basic materials and financials. The manager continues to find opportunities among attractively valued small and mid-caps, whose prices have suffered greatly from investors' lack of interest in the asset class.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,134 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Regional equities declined over the year. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risk. Markets reassessed their expectations for the peak in global interest rates as targeted inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by the increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Shares in credit facilitator Lufax Holding declined, largely due to concerns over fintech regulation, deteriorating asset quality and heightened risk over a de-listing of its American depositary receipt (ADR) shares. The position in optical and image sensor manufacturer VisEra Technologies slid in line with its majority shareholder Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company (TSMC). The holding in Japan-based online retail giant Rakuten (Tokyo) declined as it suffered a major selloff amid a pronounced value rotation in Japan. Market enthusiasm towards Australia-based clinical stage radiopharmaceutical company Telix Pharmaceuticals was driven by its robust results and better-than-expected market penetration of its leading prostate cancer imaging product Illuccix. Shares in China's low-cost variety retailer MINISO gained as it posted solid results, supported by strong margin expansion. This was driven by a higher sales mix from its overseas market and cost saving initiatives.

The manager focuses on companies with good long-term growth prospects that are cash generative and have strong management teams. Telix Pharmaceuticals is a key holding as it has a unique portfolio of assets with a solid foundation in molecularly targeted radiation for the treatment of various cancers. The strength in FPT is underpinned by its strong market share and competitive advantage. The company stands to benefit from robust growth in Vietnam's software outsourcing space.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable All China Equity Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 5 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the period under review. The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in a widespread lockdown, weighing on domestic economic activity. Later, a mortgage boycott rekindled worries of the real estate sector and rising default risk at banks. US-China tensions escalated after the US tightened restrictions on the biomanufacturing and semiconductor space and put a few US-listed Chinese firms under delisting risk. Encouragingly, Chinese authorities announced multiple stimulus measures, including an easing monetary policy and favourable policy shifts for internet, gaming and real estate companies. Furthermore, China fully reopened its borders at the start of 2023, which provided an improving outlook for the economic recovery.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period since launch in November 2022, mainly due to selected stocks in the consumer discretionary and health care sectors, and an underweight position in financials. E-commerce retailers, including PDD Holdings ADR, JD.Com and Alibaba Group Holding (CN), pulled back from a rally, spurred by China's reopening at the start of the year. Investors turned cautious towards the strength and sustainability of the consumption recovery, intense competition in the industry and tensions between China and the US. Conversely, variety retailer MINISO Group Holding rose following a rebound in offline traffic. It posted upbeat results with an improvement in profitability, driven by an upgrade in its brand and product mix.

The managers focus on selecting quality companies with sustainable growth prospects and seek opportunities from a sustainable planet, sustainable enterprises and sustainable lives. They integrate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into their investment decisions while promoting sustainability characteristics and contributing to a sustainable future. Shenzhen Mindray Bio-medical Electronics (A), the largest medical device manufacturer in China, is a key holding in the portfolio. Financial information services provider East Money Information is favoured for its leading market position and long-term growth potential.

Sustainable Asia Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 3,696 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Asia ex Japan equities slid over the period. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risk. Markets reassessed their expectations for the peak in global interest rates as targeted inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. Security selection in the financials sector added value. The position in insurer AIA Group advanced on optimism around its growth in China from both existing and new markets. The holding in life insurance company Prudential gained as it is a beneficiary of structurally increasing demand in Asia given a lack of public sector health and wealth protection. Against the backdrop of a rising interest rate environment, private lenders Axis Bank, ICICI Bank and HDFC Bank added notable value. Conversely, the position in chipmaker SK Hynix slid amid concerns around a slowdown in demand for semiconductors, especially for chips used in personal computers and smartphones. However, the long-term sector tailwinds for the company remain strong. The position in dairy products manufacturer China Mengniu Dairy also held back gains.

The fund is focused on engagement and a deeper integration of environmental, social and corporate governance (ESG) issues in the investment process to create a portfolio of high-quality growth companies that maintain high or improving sustainability characteristics. The portfolio had 87.9% exposure to stocks with high ESG ratings, which are either rated BBB and above as per MSCI or rated C or above based on Fidelity's proprietary ESG rating where MSCI ratings are not available due to non-coverage. Also, 9.2% of the fund was invested in stocks with lower but improving ESG characteristics. These are companies rated BB or below by MSCI, but where the fund management team believes the company could demonstrate improvement via the team's engagement efforts.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Asian Focus Fund [4,9]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 5 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Regional equities retreated in April 2023 and ended the period in negative territory. This was primarily driven by weakness in China amid rising geopolitical tensions and concerns over potential curbs on investment in Chinese firms from the US. These events, coupled with the fall in Asian technology bourses had a significant trickle-down effect on regional Asian equity indices. Chinese equities were further impacted by a shift in investors' perception of the degree and the pace of China's recovery, following a weaker-than-expected recovery in consumer confidence. Nonetheless, China reported improving overall economic data and stronger-than-expected quarterly GDP growth readings. Technology-focused markets including South Korea and Taiwan gave up some of their double-digit gains in light of weak global demand for electronics. Foreign institutional investors (FII) continued to favour Indian equities and ended the period in positive territory.

The FF - Sustainable Asian Focus Fund was launched on 11 April 2023. The fund aims to invests in sustainable companies that contribute to environmental or social objectives, which are aligned with one or more of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period.

The fund is focused on a fundamentals-driven search for the best opportunities among sustainable investments that would capture structural growth in Asia and aid positive societal consequences over the long term. The focus is on bottom-up stock selection and to find long-term winners with solid management teams at reasonable valuations. India's second largest private sector bank ICICI Bank and Indonesia's second largest bank by asset size Bank Rakyat Indonesia Persero are favoured for their ability to widen credit access in an under-supplied market. Taiwan's global leading semiconductor foundry Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing offers structural growth within semiconductors and is a front-runner with cutting edge technology. Broader software adoption will drive workplace and infrastructure efficiencies.

Sustainable Biodiversity Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 5 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined (in euro terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. From a sector perspective, industrials and information technology were the leading performers, while materials was among the notable laggard.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period since launch. At a sector level, materials and utilities holdings held back gains, while the exposure to the best-in-class holdings in the consumer staples sector buoyed returns. At a stock level, lithium battery equipment manufacturer Wuxi Lead declined following a slowdown in sales growth and equipment delivery. Shares in Ardagh, a supplier of sustainable metal and glass packaging, underperformed on weakening sector dynamics. Aluminium beverage can producer Crown Holdings fell as rising costs offset upbeat revenues. Clean energy company NextEra Energy came under pressure on concerns over accusations around the financing of political campaigns. Conversely, equipment and services conglomerate ANDRITZ continued to perform well. Its shares recovered following a period of underperformance due to a lull in hydro orders. Insulation company ROCKWOOL international added value on easing energy trends. Cosmetics major L'Oréal continued to enhance gains amid strong growth in Europe, North America and emerging markets.

The fund invests in companies that provide solutions to address biodiversity loss, namely changes in land and sea use; direct exploitation; climate change and pollution. These solutions providers will form most of the holdings in the portfolio. The fund also invests in best-in-class companies that follow the best practices in their own operations or that allocate capital to find new solutions. These companies can have a meaningful negative biodiversity impact, but also have the most ambitious targets in terms of cutting emissions and their impact on biodiversity.

Sustainable China A Shares Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese equities fell over the period under review. The COVID-19 pandemic resulted in a widespread lockdown, weighing on domestic economic activity. Later, a mortgage boycott rekindled worries of the real estate sector and rising default risk at banks. US-China tensions escalated after the US tightened restrictions on the biomanufacturing and semiconductor space and put a few US-listed Chinese firms under delisting risk. Encouragingly, Chinese authorities announced multiple stimulus measures, including an easing monetary policy and favourable policy shifts for internet, gaming and real estate companies. Furthermore, China fully reopened its borders at the start of 2023, which provided an improving outlook for the economic recovery.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period, mainly due to selected stocks in the information technology, financials and energy sectors amid a weakening macroeconomic environment. Paint materials maker Beijing Oriental Yuhong Waterproof Technology was weighed down by the broad-based weakness in the real estate sector. Pharmaceutical services outsourcing firm WuXi AppTec fell amid weak biotech funding growth. Bank of Ningbo (A) slid amid industry headwinds, including net interest margin pressure and the risk of asset quality deterioration. Conversely, specialty gas supplier Guangdong Huate Gas rose amid China's semiconductor localisation and import substitution trend.

The manager focuses on China's growth story while seeking to contribute to the construction of a sustainable planet, sustainable lives and sustainable enterprises. Power automation firm NARI Technology (sustainable planet) is a key holding in the portfolio. It is a pioneer at the centre of China's energy reform and the environmental, social and governance (ESG) space given the nature of its business. Another key holding is Shenzhen Mindray Bio-medical Electronics (A) (sustainable lives), which is the largest medical device manufacturer in China. Financial information services provider East Money Information (A) (sustainable enterprises) is favoured for its leading position and long-term growth potential.

Sustainable Climate Solutions Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 21 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose over the 12-month period to April 2023, though gains were capped by concerns over rising inflation and interest rates. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. In terms of regions, Europe ex UK equities led gains as positive economic surprises and encouraging earnings supported a rebound towards the latter part of the period. UK, Japan and US stocks also recorded positive returns. Emerging markets and Pacific ex Japan were the worst performers. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology (IT) companies were among the leading gainers, while real estate and materials stocks were the key decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Security selection in the communications equipment segment and the overweight stance in electric utilities detracted the most from returns. However, the underweight allocation to automobiles and strong security selection in the industry conglomerates segment added value. At a stock level, Lumentum Holdings, an optic supplier to major electronic companies, such as Apple, Ciena, Cisco and Nokia, was a notable detractor from returns. Its shares declined after the company lowered its full-year revenue and earnings guidance, primarily driven by ongoing supply shortages and weakening near-term outlook for its datacom and 3D sensing business. However, the long-term outlook remains robust, and the negatives have already been priced in, making its valuation very attractive. Shares in Silergy declined, as weaker end-market demand for consumer electronics caused an inventory pileup. However, management expects that the inventory correction may reverse in the latter half of 2023. Long-term sector tailwinds remain strong amid a shift towards other semiconductor-intensive areas such as high-performance computing, artificial intelligence and fifth-generation technology. Encouragingly, the position in Siemens, a German industrial manufacturing company, contributed strongly to returns after it posted robust full-year results, which beat forecasts and improved its outlook. Moreover, significant positive sentiment has built around the stock after the company collaborated with chip designer Nvidia to expand its digital services, enable the industrial metaverse and increase the use of artificial intelligence-driven digital twin technology.

The FF Sustainable Global Climate Solutions Fund is a global equity portfolio, designed to achieve long-term capital growth by investing in companies that enable global decarbonisation efforts. Superior investment opportunities are selected using bottom-up stock selection to identify companies with structural growth drivers, operating in industries with high barriers to entry and attractive competitive dynamics as a result of superior technological advantage or innovation. By applying a 360-degree lens to carbon reduction, the fund has the ability to invest across industries, regions and market capitalisations to find the best ideas from an alpha generation and carbon reduction prospective. The portfolio managers have identified more than 20 decarbonisation solutions, which are bucketed into five large groups: electrification of transport, clean power generation, industrial automation & digitalisation, infrastructure decarbonisation and consumer reuse. As a result of bottom-up stock selection within these themes, the fund is overweight in the industrials, IT and utilities sectors.

Sustainable Consumer Brands Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,231 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined (in euro terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer, tracking crude oil prices higher after the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies (OPEC+) unexpectedly announced production cuts of more than 1 million barrels per day, aimed at stabilising oil prices at around USD 80 a barrel. Meanwhile, materials was among the notable laggards.

The fund strongly outperformed the comparative index over the period. At an industry level, strong stock selection in the textiles, apparel & luxury goods segment proved rewarding, while the exposure to the broadline retail industry weighed on returns. At a stock level, luxury conglomerate LVMH Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton rallied, buoyed by higher sales and strong performance across segments. Richemont Cie Financiere added value amid China's reopening and a supportive political backdrop for luxury goods demand. Cosmetics major L'Oréal enhanced gains, driven by strong growth in Europe, North America and other emerging markets. Beauty products provider Coty continued to deliver strong quarterly earnings and made progress across its strategic growth pillars. Conversely, certain growth stocks such as Amazon.com fell, underscoring the growing pressure on digital advertising spending, revenue growth and rising labour costs. Electric vehicle manufacturer Tesla declined following disappointing quarterly earnings and subdued margins.

The portfolio manager looks to invest in businesses that exhibit a strong brand with a demonstrated consumer moat reflected in superior pricing power, innovation and valuable intellectual property. The universe includes, but is not limited to, consumer sectors. Importance is placed on the quality of the management team and their track record, as the manager believes a clear vision and coherent execution are essential in a globalised world consisting of a multitude of competitors. Sustainable investing is core to the fund's quality-focused and fundamentals-driven investment process. The strategy focuses on issuers with robust social and environmental practices, which should reflect an enhanced brand leadership and market share over time.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Demographics Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,126 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced (in USD terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March.

The fund generated positive returns and outperformed the index over the period. Stock picking in financials and health care enhanced gains, while consumer discretionary and information technology was a source of weakness. Shares in e-commerce giant Amazon.com tumbled due to a rising interest rate environment, disappointing quarterly results and a weaker outlook in light of higher costs. The underweight stance in Apple held back relative gains as its shares rose amid expectations that it would move into the rapidly expanding augmented reality sector. Shares in luxury conglomerate LVMH Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton rose on the back of its impressive top-line in the fourth quarter and FY2022 results. Cosmetics major L'Oréal benefited from optimism surrounding China's reopening and expectations of slower interest rate hikes by the US Federal Reserve.

The fund remains well-balanced and diversified, with an attractive positioning that stands to benefit from the long-term theme of demographics. Sector positioning is aligned with demographics-driven growth to harness the benefits from factors such as longer lives with higher life expectancy; better lives, reflecting expanding middle-class wealth, particularly in emerging markets; and more lives in line with the population growth trend. The fund has prominent exposure to the health care, consumer discretionary and information technology sectors.

Sustainable Emerging Markets Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,535 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging markets declined sharply over the review period, due to various factors including ongoing geopolitical tensions, the continued impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and rising inflation. Markets were weighed down as the US Federal Reserve (Fed) signalled tighter financial conditions before moving decisively to raise rates to tame inflation. Emerging market central banks also moved early and aggressively to tighten their monetary policies, having noted that inflation was rising substantially above their respective targets, exacerbated by the war in Ukraine, which led to a spike in food and energy prices. Markets strengthened somewhat in the second half of the review period, supported by the economic reopening in China, although a more risk-off environment emerged from March, in response to the turmoil in the developed market banking sector.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the comparative index over the year. At the sector level, robust stock picking in the financials sector contributed the most to performance. Here, HDFC Bank, AIA Group and Bank Central Asia were among the top contributors to returns. Conversely, weak stock selection in China hampered performance. Here, China Mengniu Dairy, Zhongsheng Group Holdings, Beijing Oriental Yuhong and Tencent came under pressure.

During the period, the focus remained on identifying and owning well-managed businesses with attractive return profiles, an accretive reinvestment opportunity and valuations that offer an adequate margin of safety on a free-cash-flow basis. Within information technology (IT), the fund's largest sector overweight, hardware industry leaders such as Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing, SK Hynix and Samsung Electronics were among the preferred positions. In the industrials sector, the fund has significant exposure to aircraft leaser BOC Aviation. Within financials, AIA Group remains one of the high-conviction positions in the portfolio. The fund remains underweight in the materials sector, where it only has exposure to copper through holdings in First Quantum Minerals and Southern Copper.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Europe Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 260 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12 months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund generated positive returns but underperformed the index over the period, primarily due to the underweight positioning in industrials and the overweight exposure to health care. Stock selection across communication services, energy, materials, industrials and informational technology also detracted from returns. However, strong stock selection in utilities and consumer staples added value, while the overweight exposure to consumer discretionary was a source of strength. At the stock level, global nutrition and materials conglomerate DSM weighed on returns as tight global supply chains resulted in weaker volumes across divisions. Some of these losses were offset by consumer discretionary holdings such as Inditex, LVMH Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton and Zalando.

The fund leverages Fidelity's differentiated research capabilities and analysts' top ideas to deliver a concentrated portfolio that promotes sustainable characteristics, with high stock-specific risk that should generate consistent excess returns. The investment analysis considers a wide range of environmental and social characteristics on an ongoing basis. The fund is broadly sector neutral, with overweight positions in health care and information technology, and an underweight stance in financials and consumer discretionary.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable European Smaller Companies Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 123 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European smaller equities rose (in USD terms) over the 12 months under review, but registered negative returns in euro terms. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund outperformed the index during the review period, largely driven by favourable sector positioning. The underweight stance in real estate and overweight exposure to consumer discretionary added significant value. Holdings within the consumer driven and industrials sectors also enhanced gains. Shares in Vitesco Technologies benefited from multiple broker upgrades, while Balfour Beatty performed well after it reported strong results for the first half of 2022. Conversely, the overweight positioning in financials and communication services, as well as security selection in health care and financials, held back gains. Media business Future Plc was the biggest stock specific detractor from performance. Its shares derated in FY22, amid concerns over the state of digital advertising markets due to weaker consumer sentiment.

The managers are focused on identifying well-managed, cash generative companies that have a clear market leadership position, a sustainable competitive advantage and profits driven by strong sales growth. This is coupled with environmental, social and governance (ESG) analysis at the stock and sector levels to select companies that have best practices, high ESG scores and low controversy risks. The fund has overweight positions in communication services, materials and financials, while being underweight in industrials, real estate and energy.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Eurozone Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 473 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the period. Initially, increasing concerns around inflation led to volatile swings and significant sector and style rotations across global markets. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise in early 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In addition, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund generated positive returns but underperformed the index over the period. Stock picking in utilities and consumer discretionary weighed on returns, while positioning in industrials (overweight), utilities (underweight) and financials (overweight) was also a source of weakness. Stock selection in financials, health care and information technology added value. Pure play renewable energy operators Neoen and Solaria Energia declined. High interest rates and inflation, coupled with supply chain bottlenecks have disrupted wind and solar projects, pushed up costs and led to value creation concerns. Conversely, LVMH Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton rallied on better-than-expected FY2022 results, along with an encouraging outlook for the current year. Luxury cars manufacturer BMW was another source of strength.

The market has received renewed impetus from China's re-opening and better-than-expected first quarter results. Lower worries about energy shortages, easing supply bottlenecks and the continued resilience of the labour market should provide tailwinds. The portfolio managers continue to focus on quality growth companies that have attractive fundamentals and superior environmental, social and governance characteristics. As a result of bottom-up stock selection, the fund has an overweight allocation to the information technology, consumer discretionary and industrials sectors.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Future Connectivity Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 237 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced (in USD terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style factor preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer, tracking crude oil prices higher after the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies (OPEC+) unexpectedly announced production cuts of more than 1 million barrels per day, aimed at stabilising oil prices at around USD 80 a barrel, while materials were among the notable laggards.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. The holding in Chinese online travel company Trip.com rallied after the government loosened its strict COVID-19 measures. Its shares rose as the travel and leisure sector saw a revival following the removal of quarantine and tracking measures. Shares in Motorola Solutions rallied after it released better than expected fourth quarter results. Despite supply chain disruptions, total revenues soared and surpassed the company's guidance. Shares in music and media services company Spotify rose after it announced a redesign of its app, which should help to further differentiate the product, with its focus on multimedia, and drive more user engagement. The company also announced that it has surpassed 500 million monthly average users.

The position in network components manufacturer Lumentum Holdings fell in early April, after it preannounced that its March quarter sales would miss guidance and consensus estimates as a client unexpectedly cut orders due to inventory management. The holding in semiconductor developer Marvell Technology declined after it released weaker than expected guidance for revenues and earnings, largely due to a slowdown in the datacentres segment. The overweight position in Ericsson declined. Despite releasing strong results in the first quarter, its shares fell after it announced weaker than expected free cash flow for 2023 due to restructuring costs and weak guidance for the second quarter.

The fund invests in the enablers, networks and innovators, primarily in the communication services and information technology sectors that are driving advances in Future Connectivity. The Sustainable Future Connectivity universe has benefited from stronger growth than the broader market, and the fund aims to invest in companies with even better growth potential than the thematic universe. The fund exploits this theme with a deep understanding of underlying technologies, new business models and a global investment perspective. A focus on sustainability forms a key part of this process, particularly in digital ethics.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Global Equity Fund [4,9]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 5 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities witnessed positive trends over the days since inception. Investors welcomed upbeat corporate results, which spurred a broad rally, while shaking off worries over a slowing economy and the likelihood of continued monetary policy tightening, suggested by less favourable economic data.

The fund was launched on 26 April 2023, and invests in companies that enable the achievement of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). These SDG-enablers benefiting from long-term structural growth trends drive not only improved real-world outcomes, but also improved shareholder returns.

The portfolio management team invests in duration and change (structural and transitory) businesses. Under the duration category, the focus is on companies with durable competitive advantages or underappreciated growth tailwinds, where the market overlooks the compounding potential of these businesses. The structural change category consists of companies whose improvement in the underlying quality of the business through portfolio change, industry change, management change or strategy change is underappreciated by the market. The transitory change category consists of companies where a short-term event is weighing on the perception and valuations of a high-quality business.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Global Health Care Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 1,648 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced (in USD terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Stock picking in biotechnology and the overweight exposure to life sciences tools & services weighed on returns, while security selection within health care equipment & supplies added value. While contract research organisations (CRO) ICON and IQVIA reported consensus beating earnings per share for the first quarter and reiterated their guidance for the year, their shares slid due to concerns around book-to-bill ratios and funding for biotech. Shares in Stryker rallied after it reported consensus-beating earnings for the fourth quarter, driven by strength across all segments. Shares in Boston Scientific rose on solid organic growth in the fourth quarter, with beats across most divisions.

The fund invests in good quality companies that are set to benefit from long-term structural growth drivers within health care, namely the ageing of the population and increased health care needs. Health care companies tend to be defensive in nature, as even in times of volatility and uncertainty, demand for drugs and medical procedures will not change. Given its attractive growth opportunities, the fund maintains an overweight stance in the life sciences tools and services sub-sector, but remains selective and underweight in the pharmaceuticals sector.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Japan Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : JPY 48,678 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Japanese equities rose over the period. However, share price gains were capped as concerns over broadening inflationary risks, as well as increasing interest rates weighed on stock prices. Worries over a potentially widespread fallout from the collapse of US-based Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, as well as troubled Swiss lender Credit Suisse, dampened investor sentiment in March 2023. Faced with escalating price pressures, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) responded with a series of interest rate hikes, which saw the yen weaken sharply against the US dollar. This prompted Japan's Ministry of Finance to intervene in the currency market in September, for the first time since 1998. Earlier in the period, share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments. Signs of a peak in US inflation as well as expectations for a recovery in the Chinese economy also helped to improve sentiment. However, the US Fed's more hawkish stance and the Bank of Japan's unexpected decision to adjust its yield curve control policy in the latter half of the period drove a sharp decline in share prices. At a sector level, financials, consumer staples and industrials were the leading gainers. Conversely, real estate and communication services companies were the weakest performers, although they recorded positive returns.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. The underweight stance in the banking sector was the most significant drag on relative performance. Stock selection in technology-related segments also weighed on returns. Conversely, individual stock picks in the foods sector added value. The share prices of pharmaceuticals companies lagged the broader market despite no significant change in fundamentals. This largely reflects a rotation into early cyclicals. In this environment, the holding in Nippon Shinyaku was among the most significant detractors from performance. However, its shares continue to look undervalued relative to the strength of the company's pipeline and are likely to perform well amid heightened economic uncertainty. The holding in information technology services company Nomura Research Institute came under pressure due to the impact that rising costs overseas had on earnings, as well as unfavourable supply/demand factors. However, order momentum in its core domestic business, led by the financials platform segment, remains strong. Orders in the industrials sector are also recovering. Conversely, holdings in consumer-related stocks in the foods and retail sectors added value. Key examples are Ajinomoto, Yakult Honsha and Fast Retailing.

The fund focuses on sustainable growth companies with strong environmental, social, and governance (ESG) characteristics. The portfolio manager utilises bottom-up analysis to select quality companies with high sustainable growth, above average returns and strong balance sheets. This is coupled with ESG analysis at the stock and sector level to select companies that follow best practices and sustainable development, and have high ESG scores and low controversy risks. It is a research-driven approach that leverages Fidelity's proprietary fundamental and ESG research.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable US Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 223 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US equities rose over the 12-months under review. The period started on a negative note, as Russia's continued conflict with Ukraine raised the cost of essential commodities. The third quarter witnessed the passing of the CHIPS ACT and the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) by the Joe Biden Administration, which supported equities. Markets also reacted positively to third quarter earnings. 2023 started on a strong note after the Consumer Price Index (CPI) eased, strengthening the case for a smaller rate hike by the US Federal Reserve (Fed). Equities advanced in March despite the volatility, as easing fears of a contagion from the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank in the US supported sentiment. Investors also reacted positively to early first quarter earnings results. Against this backdrop, energy and industrials were the best performers, while real estate and consumer discretionary were among worst biggest laggards.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. The underweight stance in Tesla contributed strongly to relative returns. Its shares fell after the electric vehicle manufacturer introduced an aggressive pricing strategy, missed first quarter consensus earnings before interest and taxes (EBIT) and announced margins that were below guidance. The position in stormwater management business Advanced Drainage Systems rose following the passage of the Inflation Reduction Act. The act is a positive for companies that have exposure to clean energy. The overweight position in environmentally sustainable outdoor living products Azek enhanced gains. Investor confidence in the company rose after data points indicated robust end market demand.

The holding in financial services provider SVB Financial Group was the largest detractor from performance, after the bank entered into receivership by regulators following a deposit run. SVB saw significant deposit outflows driven by a deterioration in sentiment among its long-established customer base of technology start-ups. Shares in clinical research company ICON weighed on returns as investors rotated towards defensive sectors after renewed concerns about the US banking sector led to a brief sell off in March. On a positive note, the company released better than expected first quarter results and reiterated its full-year revenues and earnings guide. The position in global organic and natural food manufacturer Hain Celestial fell after it reported lower than expected quarterly results. Its earnings and revenues missed consensus estimates, despite strong sales in North America. The company reported increased inflation, packaging shortages and decreasing consumer confidence in Europe as reasons for the disappointing quarter. It also lowered its guidance for the next quarter.

As part of Fidelity's Sustainable Family, the fund exhibits enhanced sustainable characteristics. The fund is differentiated due to its high active share, focused on owning sustainable enablers. The strategy aims to use sustainable investing to drive positive change, utilising the strength and depth of Fidelity's propriety research team. The portfolio managers aim to generate consistent, predictable excess returns over time. The environmental, social and governance (ESG) thematic is not only integrated, but integral to the selection and construction of the fund.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Water & Waste Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,949 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose over the 12-month period to April 2023, though gains were capped by concerns over rising inflation and interest rates. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. In terms of regions, Europe ex UK equities led gains as positive economic surprises and encouraging earnings supported a rebound towards the latter part of the period. UK, Japan and US stocks also recorded positive returns. Emerging markets and Pacific ex Japan were the worst performers. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology companies were among the leading gainers, while real estate and materials stocks were the key decliners.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. The overweight stance in the containers and packaging segment as well as in the health care equipment and supplies sector detracted from returns. The overweight exposure to machinery added value. At a stock level, China Lesso Group Holdings, a large industrial group manufacturing piping and building materials in China, was a notable detractor from performance. The company's annual results were short of consensus estimates due to weaker volumes in light of the property downcycle. However, China Lesso continues to gain market share. Moreover, as raw material headwinds are reversing, the company is expected to grow in the latter half of 2023 against the backdrop of a stable property market. The position in Crown Holdings, one of the largest US food and beverage can manufacturers, weighed on returns. Higher rates have weighed on the stock as it has high leverage, but the defensive characteristics of the business are likely to support stronger shareholder returns. The holding in Interpump Group, an Italian company specialising in the production of high-pressure water pumps and one of the world's leading groups in the hydraulic sector, rose as it reported robust annual results, logging a strong year-on year increase in net profits and sales. The company has decided to stick to its disciplined approach of having leverage, and finds itself in a strong position for accelerated growth over the long term.

The portfolio managers look to maintain a high purity thematic fund, which seeks to deliver long-term capital growth and contribute to the sustainability of global water and waste practices. The fund is balanced across both the water and waste sectors as a result of bottom-up stock selection. The managers believe the water and waste management sectors are driven by long-term megatrends. These include urbanisation and population growth, growing consumption, an ageing infrastructure, climate change and responsible resource consumption.

Fidelity Funds

Switzerland Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : CHF 268 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Swiss equities rose over the period. Initially, increasing concerns around inflation led to volatile swings and significant sector and style rotations across global markets. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine accelerated the economic deterioration that was already under way and increased the pressure on supply chains. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise in early 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In addition, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund outperformed the index over the review period, driven by strong stock picking in health care and consumer staples. Favourable positioning in health care (underweight) and financials (overweight) also added notable value. However, the overweight stance in materials and stock selection in industrials pared gains. At a stock level, Tecan rose on consensus beating results through the review period. The structural underweight stance in Roche Holding also added value. Its shares declined after the company warned that its profits will decline modestly in FY23. Conversely, the bias against pharmaceuticals major Novartis weighed on relative returns as its shares were resilient despite an uncertain environment due to inflation and geopolitics.

The fund continues to focus on companies with high quality business models and management teams. It maintains a sizable allocation to the health care, financials and industrials sectors in absolute terms. Relative to the index, the fund's main underweights are in consumer staples and health care, while the largest overweight exposures are to industrials and materials. The manager is cautious given the uncertainty caused by the Russia-Ukraine war and the inflation environment. He believes that the likelihood of a recession is rising rapidly, as sanctions are unlikely to reverse even if the situation in Ukraine stabilises.

Thailand Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 176 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Thai equities declined over the year, as markets continued to price in weaker-than-expected quarterly GDP numbers released earlier in the year. In addition, lacklustre corporate earnings and weak domestic consumption, despite the recovery in tourism, weighed on markets. Most sectors ended in negative territory, with information technology (IT) and materials among the key laggards, while health care and real estate remained in positive territory.

The fund outperformed the index over the review period. Security selection in the IT, energy and consumer discretionary sectors added value. The underweight stance in IT services provider Jasmine Technology Solution and IT hardware components manufacturer Fabrinet added relative value amid market corrections in these overvalued stocks. Shares in PTT Exploration & Production (F) advanced as it reported revenue growth supported by higher average selling prices. It remains a core holding in the energy space and still trades on undemanding valuations. Conversely, the holding in Asian Sea Corp was a key detractor from performance. The stock suffered from a de-rating after the spin-off and initial public offering (IPO) of its pet food subsidiary, as some investors switched positions to the new listing and the parent company started to trade with an implicit holding company discount. Investors took profits in pet food company i-Tail. Nevertheless, these are high quality businesses with extremely long-standing relationships with customers; long-term contracts with high visibility on volumes and margins; and a strong track record of innovation.

The manager pursues a well-balanced approach to bottom-up stock selection, seeking to identify opportunities across various stages of the industry lifecycle (i.e., in both "growth" and "mature" industries), and regardless of the sensitivity to business cycles (i.e., in both "defensive" and "cyclical" industries). This approach is necessary in Thailand given the limited market breadth, and provides superior investment results versus chasing a specific theme or narrow style bias. The fund is currently overweight in consumer staples, real estate, consumer discretionary, health care and IT names due to the alpha potential in these sectors.

Fidelity Funds

UK Special Situations Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : GBP 119 MILLION

Manager's Overview

UK equities gained over the 12-month period, despite a slew of challenges including rising inflationary pressures and lack of progress in the Russia-Ukraine conflict. Meanwhile, central banks continued to raise interest rates as they reiterated their commitment to bring down high inflation, even at the risk of an economic downturn. In the UK, this amounted to the Bank of England delivering 11 consecutive interest rate hikes, taking its policy rate to 4.25% in March, the highest level since 2008. The UK was also faced with a sell-off in equities in September following a failed mini-budget by the then-government led by Elizabeth Truss, but subsequently recovered after new chancellor Jeremy Hunt carried out a near-complete policy U-turn in October. This positive momentum continued in early November, as tentative signs of cooling inflationary pressures in the US bolstered expectations of a slowdown in the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) monetary policy tightening cycle. However, a series of strong economic reports later in the period led to concerns that central banks may keep rates elevated for longer than expected. Volatility returned in March due to the turmoil in the banking sector, which ignited concerns around the stability of the financial system.

The fund recorded positive returns but underperformed the comparative index over the year. Stock selection in the energy and consumer discretionary sectors detracted from performance, while the overweight stance in financials added value. Irish lender AIB Group was the leading contributor to returns as its shares benefited from an improved outlook for interest income in an environment of rising rates. The group reported strong annual profits and robust loan growth, and also announced higher dividends. The holding in outsourcing group Mitie rose after it reported higher-than-expected profits and launched a share buyback programme. The company also secured a series of contract wins and renewals from clients such as the Ministry of Defence and Eurostar. In the energy sector, the lack of exposure to BP held back relative gains as its shares rose after it announced a shift in strategy alongside annual results. The position in small oil and gas producer Ithaca Energy declined following the government's decision to increase the windfall tax on profits made from extracting UK oil and gas.

The managers remain selective and favour companies with lower levels of debt and the resilience to navigate the current market uncertainty. The weak economic environment is likely to remain challenging in the near term, especially for those corporates/consumers in need of refinancing their debt. The relative attractiveness of UK valuations versus other markets and the large divergence in performance between different parts of the market continue to create good opportunities for attractive returns from UK stocks on a three-to-five-year view.

Fidelity Funds

World Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 4,995 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Developed world equities declined (in EUR terms) over the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer, tracking crude oil prices higher after the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies (OPEC+) unexpectedly announced production cuts of more than 1 million barrels per day, aimed at stabilising oil prices at around USD 80 a barrel. Meanwhile, materials was among the notable laggards.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. While selected information technology (IT) names detracted from returns, selected conviction holdings gained on positive news flows. At a stock level, Fidelity National Information Services declined after it said it plans to spin off the Worldpay merchant-solutions business it had acquired in 2019. The underweight stance in Apple held back relative gains as its shares rose amid expectations that it would move into the rapidly expanding augmented reality sector. Biopharmaceutical company Horizon Therapeutics lagged due to disappointing quarterly results and a weak sales trajectory for Tepezza, its leading drug for thyroid eye disease. On a positive note, the lack of exposure to Tesla contributed to relative returns, as the stock declined following disappointing quarterly earnings and subdued margins. HCA Healthcare rose on the back of accelerating inpatient volume growth, led by robust growth in non-COVID-19 and non-flu volumes.

At a sector level, the portfolio management team increased the allocation to the health care sector, with exposure to attractive end markets that are undergoing steady growth, which should enable these companies to preserve profitability in light of inflationary pressures given their high cash flow yields. With the risk of further banking uncertainty and a more questionable earnings outlook, the team remains cautious on the exposure to the financials sector. The portfolio management team also increased the position in the utilities sector, with a keen focus on renewables and invested in businesses that remain well positioned to benefit from the energy transition theme and attractive network exposures. Within the IT sector, the team focuses on value opportunities and invests in mature cash flow generating businesses.

Fidelity Funds

Asia Pacific Dividend Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 434 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Regional equities declined over the year. Investor sentiment continued to be undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risk. Markets reassessed their expectations for the peak in global interest rates as targeted inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to market volatility. Optimism over China's reopening and its ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by the increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year. The position in Swire Pacific (A) benefited from robust rental income from its Hong Kong commercial real estate spaces and upbeat returns from its Coca-Cola bottling business. Sun Hung Kai Properties gained amid expectations of potential tenant sales recovery for its Hong Kong retail malls due to the release of pent-up travel demand from China. The allocation to Bank Mandiri Persero advanced. It is preferred as a high-quality bank with a strong deposit franchise and attractive dividend yield. Severe global demand pressure and rising inventory levels weighed on technology stocks. Against this backdrop, the holding in Taiwan Union Technology fell. The position in real estate investment trust (REIT) Digital Core REIT fell due to increasing cost of debt in light of interest rate hikes by the US Federal Reserve.

The manager looks for companies with strong business moats and credible capital allocation policies, which should offer investors compounding returns and dividend payments. The preference is towards companies with a sustainable dividend stream that are supported by strong balance sheets and predictable cash flows. Uni-President Enterprises is favoured for its attractive valuation and robust business model. China Yangtze Power is another preferred holding. It is the largest global hydropower utility with a strong balance sheet and stable dividend policy.

Fidelity Funds

European Dividend Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 299 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12 months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund underperformed the index over the period. European equities advanced, and the fund's defensive bias held back relative gains. The underweight stance in the consumer discretionary sector weighed on returns. At a stock level, German real estate major Vonovia was the biggest detractor from performance. The market has been concerned about the sustainability of its dividend, which was cut by 50% in March. The wider sector has also come under pressure due to concerns over the financing and loan repayment challenges faced by commercial real estate investors. Elsewhere, UK-based Persimmon declined after it posted a fall in its half-yearly profits as the housing market witnessed a slowdown due to rising costs and supply chain problems.

The fund is defensively positioned. The manager retains a longstanding overweight in financials, where high quality stocks, primarily in the insurance and diversified financials space, are well represented. The fund has an overweight allocation to diverse industrials, with a focus on capital goods and information services companies. Other large sector positions are in health care, consumer staples and utilities. These are more classically 'defensive' businesses where the manger seeks diversified companies that operate in strong end markets. Meanwhile, the portfolio retains an underweight stance in the information technology and consumer discretionary sectors, where valuations are stretched.

Global Dividend Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 12,836 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer.

The fund delivered positive returns and outperformed the index over the period, due to its focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. Holdings in financials and industrials contributed the most to performance. At a stock level, insurer Munich Re contributed strongly to returns after it pre-announced better-than-expected quarterly results. The company also reiterated its full-year guidance for net income of EUR 4 billion and said that surpassing this target has now become more likely. Elsewhere, professional services company Wolters Kluwer performed very well on robust full year results. It delivered 6% organic growth in 2022, driven by digital and service subscription revenues. The company benefits from 80% recurring revenues.

The portfolio remains defensively positioned. The manager maintains a strong quality bias and owns predominantly defensive business models with robust balance sheets at attractive valuations. From a sector perspective, the fund has key holdings in the consumer staples, non-life insurance, financial exchanges, pharmaceuticals and other sectors with limited correlation to economic growth. In the more cyclical parts of the market, the fund holds a number of mature businesses in the technology space (particularly in the semiconductor and hardware industries) that meet its investment criteria. The manager also has positions in high-quality industrials businesses.

Fidelity Funds

Global Equity Income Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 202 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer.

The fund delivered positive returns and outperformed the index over the period, due to its focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. Holdings in financials and industrials contributed the most to relative performance. At a stock level, professional services company Wolters Kluwer performed very well on robust full year results. It delivered 6% organic growth in 2022, driven by digital and service subscription revenues. Moreover, the company benefits from 80% recurring revenues. Elsewhere, insurance companies Munich Re and Progressive contributed strongly to returns.

High-quality dividend stocks continue to play an important role in investors' portfolios as inflation, higher interest rates and growth concerns put pressure on equity markets. The manager maintains a defensive strategy and remains well diversified on both regional and sector counts as a result of the strategy's focus on companies with resilient returns and strong balance sheets. The largest absolute and relative sector weighting is to financials. However, holdings within the sector are typically higher quality, defensive businesses with low balance sheet risk. Industrials is another significant overweight. The fund's considerable weighting to the technology sector is made up of technology hardware as well as software companies.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable European Dividend Plus Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 5 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12 months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund underperformed the index over the period. European equities advanced, and the fund's defensive bias held back relative gains. The underweight stance in the consumer discretionary sector weighed on returns. At a stock level, German real estate major Vonovia was the biggest detractor from performance. The market has been concerned about the sustainability of its dividend, which was cut by 50% in March. The wider sector has also come under pressure due to concerns over the financing and loan repayment challenges faced by commercial real estate investors. Elsewhere, UK-based Persimmon declined after it posted a fall in its half-yearly profits as the housing market witnessed a slowdown due to rising costs and supply chain problems.

The fund balances the need for quality, income (level, resilience and growth prospects) and value, and is defensively positioned. The manager retains a longstanding overweight in financials, where high quality stocks, primarily in the insurance and diversified financials space, are well represented. The fund has an overweight allocation to diverse industrials, with a focus on capital goods and information services companies. Other large sector positions are in health care, consumer staples and utilities. These are more classically 'defensive' businesses where the manger seeks diversified companies that operate in strong end markets. Meanwhile, the portfolio retains an underweight stance in the information technology and consumer discretionary sectors, where valuations are stretched.

Sustainable Global Dividend Plus Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 312 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined in euro terms during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer.

The fund outperformed the index over the period, due to the mangers' focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. Positions in industrials and financials contributed the most to returns. At a stock level, the holding in 3i Group performed very well on robust full-year results, with net sales 30% ahead and earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortisation (EBITDA) 46% ahead of 2021 figures. Elsewhere, consumer goods major Unilever enhanced gains on the back of robust first quarter earnings. The beat was primarily led by strong results for its personal care segment. Despite another big rise in prices, only a small dip in volumes was observed, which was much better than consensus expectations. Management retained its full-year margin guidance.

The fund aims to achieve income with the potential for some capital growth. The portfolio's income is enhanced via an overwrite strategy, whereby call options are written on holdings in the portfolio. The portfolio is well diversified from a regional and sector perspective, with a clear defensive tilt as a result of the strategy's focus on companies with resilient returns and strong balance sheets. The fund has key holdings in the consumer staples, insurance, diversified financials, pharmaceuticals and other sectors with limited correlation to economic growth.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Global Equity Income Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 787 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities advanced during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer.

The fund delivered positive returns and outperformed the index over the period, due to its focus on owning high quality, resilient companies. Holdings in industrials and financials contributed the most to relative returns. At a stock level, professional services company Wolters Kluwer performed very well on robust full year results. It delivered 6% organic growth in 2022, driven by digital and service subscription revenues. Moreover, the company benefits from 80% recurring revenues. Elsewhere, insurance companies Munich Re and Progressive added notable value.

The fund focusses on sustainable businesses with strong environmental, social, and governance (ESG) characteristics. High-quality dividend stocks continue to play an important role in investors' portfolios as inflation, higher interest rates and growth concerns put pressure on equity markets. The manager maintains a defensive strategy and remains well diversified on both regional and sector counts as a result of the strategy's focus on companies with resilient returns and strong balance sheets. The largest absolute and relative sector weighting is to financials. However, holdings within the sector are typically higher quality, defensive businesses with low balance sheet risk. Industrials is another significant overweight. The fund's considerable weighting to the technology sector is made up of technology hardware as well as software companies.

Fidelity Funds

Strategic European Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 4 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the period. Initially, increasing concerns around inflation led to volatile swings and significant sector and style rotations across global markets. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine accelerated the economic deterioration that was already under way and increased the pressure on supply chains. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise in early 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In addition, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund underperformed the index over the review period. The fund's long-only European equities portfolio contributed to absolute returns, while the market neutral portfolio also added value. On an absolute basis, the positions in the long-only European equity allocation that contributed to performance included Inditex, SAP and Prosus. Meanwhile, holdings in Vonovia and Ericsson were among the top detractors from returns.

The fund offers exposure to European equity markets through a selection of up to 30 high-conviction ideas and aims to deliver lower volatility than European equity indices. In order to achieve this aim, the fund excludes the lowest quality, more volatile businesses, as well as good quality businesses that are on unusually expensive valuations. The fund also measures volatility adjusted expected returns with 10% hurdle rate over a 3–5-year-period. This reduces equity exposure when the balance of risk/reward on individual stocks deteriorates. By switching alpha generation to a portfolio of analyst long/short ratings (removing beta), the managers aim to reduce the risk of significant portfolio declines during market drawdowns. The fund's biggest sector exposures are to consumer staples, health care and information technology.

Fidelity Funds

Asia Pacific Multi Asset Growth & Income Fund [1,4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 96 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Equities in the Pacific ex Japan region slid over the 12-month period ending April 2023. Optimism over China's reopening and its economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China. Against this backdrop, Chinese equities slid sharply. Stock markets in Australia also retreated but outperformed the broader market. Within fixed income, US dollar denominated Asian high yield bonds came under pressure, due to a drag from the property sector. US dollar denominated Asian investment grade rose marginally as spreads tightened.

The fund posted negative returns over the period, but delivered income in-line with its objectives. The allocation to Asian high yield bonds weighed significantly on returns due to concerns over default risks in the Chinese property sector. This was partially offset by the exposure to emerging market local currency debt. Positions in Asian and Chinese equities detracted from performance, due to increasing geopolitical tensions. Meanwhile, Asian investment grade bonds along with US and Australian government bonds mitigated some losses.

The managers find more positive stories in Asia than in the West due to cheaper valuations, better growth prospects, lower inflation, easier policy and credit conditions that are mostly unaffected by the banking crisis in the West. They reduced the exposure to Asian high yield bonds and added to emerging market local currency debt due to the high real yield levels that are available in this asset class. The managers also reduced the allocation to Asian equities, but still maintain conviction in the region due to its growth outlook. More recently, they raised the existing alternatives exposure to higher conviction renewables and infrastructure names as these companies offer attractive yield levels and growth prospects. On the Defensive assets side, the position in Asian investment grade bonds was increased as the managers are adding back to high quality duration assets over time. Meanwhile, the holding in Chinese government bonds was sold as its relative attractiveness compared to its developed market peers has played out.

Fidelity Funds

European Multi Asset Income Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 495 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities gained in euro terms over the year, while European bonds posted marginally negative returns as credit spreads widened. Equity markets were supported as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies over the second half of the period. However, geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe capped gains.

The fund distributed natural income in line with its objective, though it generated negative returns over the year under review. The exposure to investment grade bonds detracted the most from performance, followed by positions in hybrid bonds, infrastructure, and high yield bonds. As European markets had an upbeat momentum, the exposure to equities limited overall losses. However, this was partially offset by the exposure to equity hedges.

Recession risks are increasing, given rising stress in the banking sector and tightening lending conditions. The fund is therefore cautiously positioned towards risk assets over the medium term, while focusing on increasing quality across equity and credit allocations. The managers rotated proceeds from emerging market hard currency to local currency debt in the latter half of the period, given steep curves and better inflation dynamics compared to tight US dollar spreads in hard currency bonds. Meanwhile, they increased the exposure to hybrid bonds as valuations are attractive for medium-term investors. Additionally, the allocation to developed market equities was broadly decreased given rising fears of slowing economic growth, while the managers introduced defensive and quality equities. Meanwhile, the managers took advantage of market corrections to adjust equity market hedges dynamically. They increased the exposure to European investment grade bonds when extremely high interest rates were imposed but trimmed the position at a later stage given the rally in credit spreads.

Fidelity Funds

Global Multi Asset Defensive Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 46 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose in US dollar and sterling terms, but were marginally negative in euro terms. Concerns over rising inflation and interest rates weighed on markets. Equities fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Markets recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually lead to less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. Global bond markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity.

The fund aims to achieve a better downside profile versus a blend of 20% MSCI All Country World Net Total Return EUR Index and 80% Barclays Global Aggregate EUR Hedged Index on a rolling three-year basis. This is an objective and not a guarantee. The fund does not use a comparative index for performance purposes. The fund generated negative returns over the review period. In particular, the allocation to the Core component had a negative impact on overall performance, which was primarily driven by the allocation to the UK and US government bonds, followed by investment grade bonds, which suffered due to a continued rise in yields and widening credit spreads. The exposure to US equities further held back gains. The fund moved to a broadly defensive stance, where the Core exposure was reduced as positions in US Treasuries and equities were trimmed, while the allocation to cash was increased.

Fidelity Funds

Global Multi Asset Dynamic Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 151 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities, except Asia and emerging markets, gained over the period. Markets remained volatile due to the hawkish stance of most major central banks, weakened global growth, the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the banking sector stress. Nevertheless, China's reopening, cooling inflation and better-than-expected corporate earnings results supported market sentiment later in the period. Global bond markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs as inflation remained high. Corporate bonds appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. Elsewhere, emerging market debt posted mixed returns, with local currency bonds outperforming hard currency bonds.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. US equity strategies weighed the most on performance amid concerns over elevated inflation, an economic slowdown and the recent banking sector collapse. Asia Pacific and Chinese equities struggled due to China's COVID-19 related lockdowns. While fundamentals have improved since late 2022, intensifying US-China tensions dampened sentiment. Emerging market equities also came under pressure due to domestic political headwinds in Brazil. That said, European and Japanese equities supported performance. Within fixed income, inflation-linked bonds, selected high yield bonds and emerging market debt detracted from returns. Nevertheless, the tilt towards high-quality short duration bonds and the allocation to mid-term US Treasury notes mitigated losses. The allocation to cash also protected the portfolio's value in a down market.

The mangers have cautiously positioned the fund amid downside risks to global growth while remaining dynamic and flexible to capture opportunities as earnings growth improves and activity resumes. The managers retain the preference for quality strategies and companies with cashflow/ balance sheet strength for better resilience. They are positive on the US due to resilient economic fundamentals, supported by the strong consumer and labour segments. They also favour Asian and Chinese markets on the back of improving fundamentals in China. Within fixed income, the managers prefer sovereign bonds and duration assets amid easing inflation. Overall, the managers continue to dynamically allocate assets across asset classes, sectors and regions, with the aim to provide long-term capital growth across market cycles.

Fidelity Funds

Global Multi Asset Growth & Income Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 107 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities and global bonds rose over the review period. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance.

The fund generated negative returns while delivering natural income in line with its objective. The allocation to US investment grade and government bonds contributed to performance on the back of a resilient credit market, which was supported by improved investor sentiment. The exposure to hybrid bonds and emerging market local currency debt also added value. On the contrary, the allocation to Asian high yield bonds detracted from returns due to concerns over default risks in the Chinese property sector. Positions in global and European equities acted as a tailwind due to positive corporate earnings releases. Meanwhile, holdings in Asian and Chinese equities detracted from performance in light of increasing geopolitical tensions.

Inflation remains stubbornly high in developed markets and recession risks are increasing given rising stress in the banking sector and tightening lending conditions. As such, the managers have a cautious stance towards risk assets, with a preference for quality names across equity and credit allocations. Against this backdrop, given the rally in credit spreads, the managers increased the allocation to investment grade and longer-term US Treasury bonds. They added exposure to gold commodities, which offers defensive characteristics, and sold the Chinese government bond position as its relative attractiveness compared to its developed market peers had played out. The managers preferred emerging market debt local currency over hard currency debt due to their conviction on the asset class, as they focus on the high real yield levels that are available. They trimmed the exposure to global, Chinese and UK equities, and added to health care equities for their defensiveness, and financial equities for their improving prospects.

Global Multi Asset Income Fund [6,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 7,123 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities and global bonds rose over the review period. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance.

The fund generated negative returns while delivering natural income in line with its objective. The allocation to US investment grade and government bonds contributed to performance on the back of a resilient credit market, which was supported by improved investor sentiment. The exposure to US high yield bonds and emerging market local currency debt also added value. On the contrary, the allocation to Asian high yield bonds detracted from returns. Positions in global and European equities acted as a tailwind due to positive corporate earnings releases. Meanwhile, holdings in Asian and Chinese equities detracted from performance in light of increasing geopolitical tensions.

Inflation remains stubbornly high in developed markets and recession risks are increasing given rising stress in the banking sector and tightening lending conditions. As such, the managers have a cautious stance towards risk assets, with a preference for quality names across equity and credit allocations. Against this backdrop, given the rally in credit spreads, the managers increased the allocation to investment grade and longer-term US Treasury bonds, and added to the Japanese yen exposure. They also took profits and sold the Asian investment grade bond position in February, as spreads significantly compressed. The managers preferred emerging market local currency bonds over hard currency debt due to their conviction on the asset class, as they focus on the high real yield levels that are available. They trimmed the exposure to equities by taking profits in global, Chinese, UK and Singapore equities, and added to health care equities for their defensiveness, and European and Japanese banks for their improving prospects.

Greater China Multi Asset Growth & Income Fund [1]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 13 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Greater China equities fell over the review period. Tighter policies by major central banks to curb elevated inflation and geopolitical risks from the Russia-Ukraine conflict weighed on markets globally. Against this backdrop, Chinese and Hong Kong equities declined amid recession fears, although China reopened and introduced supportive policies in the latter half of the period. Within fixed income, US dollar denominated Chinese high yield bonds posted negative returns due to intensified risks in the country's property space. US dollar denominated Chinese investment grade bonds advanced as credit spreads narrowed.

The fund posted negative returns over the review period, while delivering income in-line with its objectives. Equities detracted from performance, led by Chinese consumer stocks. Greater China equities and Chinese value equities also weighed on returns, largely due to COVID-19 restrictions in the first half of the period and weak domestic demand. Chinese high yield bonds also dampened performance in 2022, though market sentiment improved following supportive policies by Chinese authorities. On a positive note, Asian investment grade bonds posted positive returns as credit spreads narrowed.

The managers remain positive on key opportunities in China, as the country is at the stage of reopening and implementing supportive policies. While inflation has proved less of a concern, China has suffered from developed market inflation and slowing economic growth globally. Overall, the high-level exposure to all three asset classes remained broadly unchanged. The managers trimmed the allocation to Asian high yield bonds given the volatility in the Chinese property sector through 2022 but maintained the current exposure in recent months due to a bounce in the sector. They decreased the allocation to Chinese stocks in the second half of the period to take profits, although the exposure remains meaningful given their cheap valuations. They also added significantly to Asian investment grade bonds to improve the portfolio's defensiveness.

Manager's Overview

Global equities and global bonds rose over the review period. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance.

The fund generated negative returns while delivering natural income in line with its objective. The allocation to US government bonds contributed to performance on the back of a resilient credit market, which was supported by improved investor sentiment. The exposure to global high yield bonds and emerging market local currency debt also added value. The allocation to global equities acted as a tailwind due to positive corporate earnings releases. Meanwhile, positions in US equities and alternatives detracted from performance.

Inflation remains stubbornly high in developed markets and recession risks are increasing given rising stress in the banking sector and tightening lending conditions. As such, the managers have a cautious stance towards risk assets, with a preference for quality names across equity and credit allocations. Against this backdrop, given the rally in credit spreads, the managers increased the allocation to investment grade and longer-term US Treasury bonds. They preferred emerging market debt local currency over hard currency debt due to their conviction on the asset class as they focus on the high real yield levels that are available. They also added to hybrid bonds. The managers trimmed the exposure to European and Japanese equities, and added to health care equities for their defensiveness, and European and Japanese banks for their improving prospects. Equity hedges were managed throughout the year to take advantage of market movements.

Fidelity Funds

SMART Global Defensive Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 157 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities remained broadly flat over the period. Markets were volatile due to the hawkish stance of most major central banks, weakened global growth, the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the banking sector stress. Nevertheless, China's reopening, cooling inflation and better-than-expected corporate earnings results supported market sentiment later in the period. Global bond markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Government bond yields rose to multi-year highs as inflation remained high. Corporate bonds appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and saw relatively stable corporate fundamentals.

The fund delivered negative returns over the period, mainly due to its Beta component. In the Beta component, inflation-linked bonds, investment grade corporate bonds and government bonds weighed on performance as government bond yields rose. Global high yield bonds, emerging market debt and global real estate equities also hampered performance, while dividend paying equities mitigated some drawdown. Holdings in developed market equities came under pressure, while positions in emerging markets were broadly flat. In the Alpha component, the allocation to alternatives, the systematic global macro strategy, and certain discretionary trades within the thematic and opportunistic segment weighed on returns. Meanwhile, the diversified blend of Fidelity equity strategies with the market beta hedged out was broadly flat over the period.

The fund is focused on delivering capital growth while targeting a specific volatility range. The fund gains broad market exposure via the Beta component, where asset allocation is determined systematically by a proprietary volatility management model on the basis of risk. The fund maintained a defensive stance, minimising exposure to yield and growth assets in favour of defensive assets amid a period of increased volatility. In the Alpha component, the fund holds positions that are expected to add value independent of the broad market direction. For instance, amid a highly volatile market environment, the fund has a long position in the Assenagon Alpha Volatility strategy, and selective long equity strategies based on the outlook and return potential of the underlying assets.

Asia Pacific Strategic Income Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 62 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian investment grade and high yield bonds posted negative returns, while emerging markets posted mixed returns, with local currency bonds outperforming both hard currency sovereign and corporate bonds during the period. External demand remained weak in 2022, amid rising global recession risks, sticky inflation and persistent geopolitical tensions. However, demand started to pick up in 2023 as China relaxed its zero COVID-19 policy and markets weighed the prospect of increased tourism and consumer spending as Chinese officials highlighted that its worst battle with COVID-19 may be over. The Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) readings of Asian countries remained resilient towards the end of the period, as new orders piled up and the region became more optimistic about the boost from China's reopening. Elsewhere, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) continued its hiking cycle with a series of interest rate hikes during the period, and maintained its hawkish stance.

The fund generated negative returns during the period. Stable coupon income contributed to returns, while credit selection and term structure positioning held back gains. An overweight stance in Macau-based consumer cyclicals and Turkey's quasi-sovereign credits enhanced relative gains. Conversely, an overweight exposure to Chinese and Hong Kong property names and Chinese banks & brokers weighed on returns.

In the near term, the managers prefer short-dated bonds from issuers with high credit ratings, as these issuers are generally less susceptible to economic conditions. Once market stability is sustained, they will look to gradually shift to longer dated and higher beta bonds, as well as to Asian local currencies and bonds from countries with strong domestic investment support. The managers are closely monitoring the Asian local currency market, as they see potential tailwinds as central banks approach the end of the rate hiking cycle and as further upside on the US dollar may be limited. They will continue to focus on high quality issuers and remain nimble in terms of credit exposure.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,685 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian investment grade bonds posted negative returns during the period. External demand remained weak in 2022 amid rising global recession risks, sticky inflation and persistent geopolitical tensions. However, demand started to pickup in 2023 as China relaxed its zero COVID-19 policy and markets weighed the prospect of increased tourism and consumer spending as Chinese officials highlighted that its worst battle with COVID-19 may be over. The Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) readings of Asian countries remained resilient towards the end of the period, as new orders piled in and the region became more optimistic about the boost from China's reopening. Elsewhere, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) commenced its hiking cycle with a series of interest rate hikes and maintained its hawkish stance.

The fund underperformed the index over the period. Stable coupon income contributed to returns, while credit selection and term structure positioning held back gains. An overweight stance in Macau and Chinese consumer cyclical names, as well as in Japanese banks & brokers added value. Meanwhile, an overweight stance in Chinese property and technology & communications names held back relative gains.

Following a volatile period, the market settled down at a new equilibrium, and is now reflecting a higher risk of recession with wider credit spreads and lower US Treasury yields. In the Asian investment grade bonds space, the picture is less worrying, as much of the current global growth remains in Asia, inflation is coming down and certain central banks have started to show signs of a pivot. Although Asia may not be completely insulated from global headwinds, supportive fundamentals suggest that there are attractive opportunities. Within Asia, the managers remain positive on China given continued policy support by the government. Outside of China, they remain overweight in lower-beta countries including Korea, Hong Kong and Japan, and underweight in higher-beta countries including Indonesia, India and the Philippines.

Fidelity Funds

Asian High Yield Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 2,112 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The Asian high yield market posted negative returns in US dollar terms. Investor confidence remained on the edge in the first half of the review period, due to company-specific headlines of default and liquidity woes in sectors such as China property. Market sentiment improved dramatically in the second half due to expectations of increased tourism and consumer spending on account of China's reopening. An unprecedented rebound was witnessed in property sector names since November, following the announcement of several rescue measures by the Chinese government. The market rallied in the early part of January following China's economic reopening and the government's support measures. However, the trend reversed in February, as investors focused on profit-taking and risk exposure adjustments. Markets witnessed substantial volatility in March due to the turmoil triggered by the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank in the US and Credit Suisse in Europe. The trend continued in April, as property sales witnessed a fall. KWG Property's missed payment and the potential for cross-default led to a broad-based sell-off among privately owned enterprises (POEs), while the impact was cushioned by lower US Treasury yields across the curve.

The fund posted negative returns over the review period. Credit strategy and duration positioning weighed on returns, while coupon income aided performance. From a sector perspective, property was the key detractor from performance over the period. In this regard, positions in CIFI Holdings and China SCE Group were among the top detractors from performance. Meanwhile, holdings in casino operators in the Macau region such as Studio City Finance and Wynn Macau added value, as Macau's casinos rallied on the back of a jump in gaming revenue on account of the removal of COVID-19 curbs and Chinese New Year. On the ratings front, the exposure to CCC and below rated bonds weighed on returns.

The manager expects fundamentals to be relatively supportive. This is a function of two things: firstly, regional macroeconomics are in better shape, supported by China's recovery while the rest of the world is slowing down. Inflation is less acute, growth is more robust and there are ample currency reserves for Asian economies in general. Secondly, forward earnings are expected to be robust year-on-year and better than developed markets. These provide a good foundation for cash flow and leverage. For the China property sector specifically, supportive policy measures and the nascent recovery of physical market are tailwinds, though we continue to expect differentiation between surviving developers and those at-risk, for example due to poor asset quality or unsustainable leverage.

China Government Bond Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 20 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Chinese government bonds (CGB) generated mixed results over the period. In order to boost liquidity, the People's Bank of China (PBoC) cut its reserve requirement ratio by 0.25 percentage points in the second quarter of 2022 and reduced its five-year loan prime rate for the second time in the year. In May 2022, China's State Council announced a package of policies to support the economy, which was hit by the COVID-19 outbreak, and indicated authorities' shift in focus towards growth. However, the PBoC announced a series of unexpected rate cuts in the second half of 2022 to support a cooling economy, which resulted in a sharp fall in the yield curve. Economic data in the latter half of 2022 was mixed, due to a slowdown in global demand and as macroeconomic data releases highlighted a slump in economic activity in China due to a sluggish property sector. The year 2023 started on a positive note, as the first two months of the period witnessed a continued uptick in the tourism, entertainment and consumer cyclical sectors due to the economic reopening with the removal of COVID-19 restrictions and the Chinese New Year holiday. The Chinese onshore yield curve fell at the back end as the PBoC retained its accommodative monetary stance and injected ~870 billion yuan ($129 billion) via reverse repurchase agreements in the first quarter of 2023, followed by a reserve requirement ratio cut of 0.25 percentage points in March.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period in light of global economic uncertainties and unfavourable bond selection. The underweight positions in quasi-sovereigns and sovereign bonds, as well as supranational bonds detracted from returns. Underweight positions in A, BB, and below-BB rated securities also held back gains.

China's reopening at the start of 2023 opened up interesting opportunities. The government set a 5% GDP target, and growth is likely to be led by a recovery in demand, particularly for services. Investment is expected to remain robust, supported by slower but sustained growth in infrastructure and manufacturing investment, and the government could introduce stimulus measures in the consumption sector to support that target, while property and export may remain a drag.

China High Yield Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,021 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The Chinese high yield market posted negative returns in US dollar terms. Investor confidence remained on the edge in the first half of the review period, due to company-specific headlines of default and liquidity woes in sectors such as China property. Market sentiment improved dramatically in the second half due to expectations of increased tourism and consumer spending on account of China's reopening. An unprecedented rebound was witnessed in property sector names since November, following the announcement of several rescue measures by the Chinese government. The market rallied in the early part of January following China's economic reopening and the government's support measures. However, the trend reversed in February, as investors focused on profit-taking and risk exposure adjustments. Markets witnessed substantial volatility in March due to the turmoil triggered by the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank in the US and Credit Suisse in Europe. The trend continued in April, as property sales witnessed a fall. KWG Property's missed payment and the potential for cross-default led to a broad-based sell-off among privately owned enterprises (POEs), while the impact was cushioned by lower US Treasury yields across the curve.

The fund posted negative returns over the review period. Credit strategy and duration positioning weighed on returns, while coupon income aided performance. From a sector perspective, property was the key detractor from performance over the period. In this regard, positions in CIFI Holdings, Times Property Holding and China SCE Group were among the top detractors from performance. Meanwhile, holdings in casino operators in the Macau region such as Studio City Finance and Wynn Macau added value as Macau's casinos rallied on the back of a jump in gaming revenue on account of the removal of COVID-19 curbs and Chinese New Year. On the ratings front, the exposure to BB and CCC and below rated bonds weighed on returns.

The manager expects fundamentals to be relatively supportive. This is a function of two things: firstly, regional macroeconomics are in better shape, supported by China's recovery while the rest of the world is slowing down. Inflation is less acute, growth is more robust and there are ample currency reserves for Asian economies in general. Secondly, forward earnings are expected to be robust year-on-year and better than developed markets. These provide a good foundation for cash flow and leverage. For the China property sector specifically, supportive policy measures and the nascent recovery of physical market are tailwinds, though we continue to expect differentiation between surviving developers and those at-risk, for example due to poor asset quality or unsustainable leverage.

Fidelity Funds

China RMB Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : CNY 2,324 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Offshore renminbi investment grade bonds (Dim Sum) generated positive returns, supported by high coupon income. US Treasury yields rose as the US Federal Reserve stuck to a hawkish stance and delivered several interest rate hikes, while Chinese onshore yields fell as the People's Bank of China (PBOC) continued to ease its monetary policy. US dollar denominated Chinese high yield bonds posted negative returns due to rising interest rates, while US dollar denominated Chinese investment grade bonds posted positive returns, driven by narrower credit spreads. Sentiment around the Chinese property sector remained weak amid a selloff as investors focused on unexpected defaults. On the economic front, China's GDP for the first quarter of 2023 came in at a better than expected 4.5% year-on-year, driven by a rebound in travel-related consumption and services activity.

The fund generated negative returns over the period. The credit component and overall term structure positioning, particularly for US dollar denominated bonds, weighed on performance. Conversely, high coupon income supported returns. At a sector level, the allocation to property and other financials held back gains, while consumer staples and capital goods added value. From a ratings perspective, the exposure to BB and below and not rated bonds hampered performance, while holdings in AA rated bonds proved the most rewarding.

The fund focuses on three main markets, including renminbi-denominated markets, whether onshore or offshore, to provide stable carry to anchor returns; and US dollar-denominated markets to provide tactical trading opportunities given heightened volatility. The managers have a conservative view on the outlook for developed markets as high interest rates are likely to lead to a recessionary environment. However, China is emerging from its COVID-19 restrictions at a faster than expected rate, along with a package of supportive fiscal and monetary policies. Against this backdrop, the managers look to strategically increase the allocation to the onshore bond market.

Emerging Market Corporate Debt Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 140 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted mixed returns over the period, with local currency bonds outperforming hard currency sovereigns and corporates. For much of 2022, significantly high inflation, aggressive policy tightening across developed and emerging markets, Russia's invasion of Ukraine and a growth collapse in China negatively impacted returns. Credit spreads widened as default risk rose across many countries. Some relief was found towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as investor sentiment improved amid China's economic reopening and supportive measures for the Chinese property sector. Local currency bond returns were primarily supported by lower yields.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Credit positioning was the key detractor from relative performance, while yields added value. The exposure to selected names in the China property sector hampered performance. However, an overweight position in Sands China in Macao and in Franshion Brilliant supported returns.

The managers currently maintain an overweight credit beta position in emerging market external debt. Emerging market risk appetite has taken a lead from optimism on the Fed pivot. Should the US Fed turn cautious or pause rate hikes to avoid a full-blown recession, it would be supportive for emerging markets. Meanwhile, China reported strong total social financing (TSF) data and a solid credit impulse, which lends some support to the asset class. At a country level, some of the largest overweights are in Brazil, China and Colombia, while the fund is underweight in Macao, India and the Philippines.

Emerging Market Debt Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,162 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted mixed returns over the period, with local currency bonds outperforming hard currency sovereigns and corporates. For much of 2022, significantly high inflation, aggressive policy tightening across developed and emerging markets, Russia's invasion of Ukraine and a growth collapse in China negatively impacted returns. Credit spreads widened as default risk rose across many countries. Some relief was found towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as investor sentiment improved amid China's economic reopening and supportive measures for the Chinese property sector. Local currency bond returns were primarily supported by lower yields.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Credit positioning was a key detractor from relative performance, while yields added value. At a country level, Ghana, Ukraine and China were among the key detractors from total returns. An overweight position in sovereign bonds of Zambia and Ghana detracted from performance. Meanwhile, an overweight position in sovereign bonds of Hungary and Romania added relative value.

The managers currently maintain an overweight credit beta position in emerging market external debt. Despite lower volatility compared to March, investor sentiment towards the asset class remains subdued. There are concerns around the sustainability of debt, restructuring risk and multilateral creditors in high yielding cohorts. Meanwhile, China reported strong total social financing (TSF) data and a solid credit impulse, which lends some support to the asset class. The managers are focusing on lowering risk from current levels, while continuing to move up in quality across the portfolio, given the growth sensitive nature of the asset class. At a country level, some of the largest overweights are in Mexico, China and Colombia, while the fund is underweight in Panama, Bahrain and the Dominican Republic.

Emerging Market Local Currency Debt Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 253 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted mixed returns over the period, with local currency bonds outperforming hard currency sovereigns and corporates. For much of 2022, significantly high inflation, aggressive policy tightening across developed and emerging markets, Russia's invasion of Ukraine and a growth collapse in China negatively impacted returns. Credit spreads widened as default risk rose across many countries. Some relief was found towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as investor sentiment improved amid China's economic reopening and supportive measures for the Chinese property sector. Local currency bond returns were primarily supported by lower yields.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the year, primarily supported by its yield and duration positioning. On the duration front, the fund primarily gained from the re-pricing of some Russian local currency bonds. The managers held the bonds prior to the invasion of Ukraine; they were previously valued at zero to reflect the lack of market liquidity. A window of liquidity opened-up and the bonds were traded. Therefore, in conjunction with the Fair Value committee, these bonds have been re-priced. Since Russia is no longer part of the comparative index, the re-pricing of Russian bonds led to the fund's outperformance. Within currency positioning, an underweight position in the Egyptian pound supported returns, while an overweight holding in the Ghanaian cedi held back gains.

The managers have their highest conviction position in local rates and maintain an overweight stance, reflecting the potential for rate cuts, due to weakening growth and inflation, along with high nominal and above-average real yields. The fund maintains a bias against emerging market currency, but tactically moved to a neutral position towards the tail end of the period as the euro started to strengthen against the US dollar amid easing recessionary concerns and aggressive rate hikes by the European Central Bank. This could temporarily support emerging market currencies despite sluggish global growth.

Emerging Market Total Return Debt Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 514 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging market bonds posted mixed returns over the period, with local currency bonds outperforming hard currency sovereigns and corporates. For much of 2022, significantly high inflation, aggressive policy tightening across developed and emerging markets, Russia's invasion of Ukraine and a growth collapse in China negatively impacted returns. Credit spreads widened as default risk rose across many countries. Some relief was found towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as investor sentiment improved amid China's economic reopening and supportive measures for the Chinese property sector. Local currency bond returns were primarily supported by lower yields.

The fund underperformed the index over the period, primarily due to credit positioning, while yield and term structure added value. On the duration front, the fund primarily gained from the re-pricing of some Russian local currency bonds. Within credit positioning, selected positions in China and Colombia were the key detractors from performance. The exposure to selected names in the Chinese property sector hampered performance. Meanwhile, the fund's long position in Hungarian sovereign bonds added value.

The managers currently maintain an overweight credit beta position in emerging market external debt. Despite lower volatility compared to March, investor sentiment towards the asset class is subdued. There are concerns around debt sustainability, restructuring risk and multilateral creditors in high yielding cohorts. The managers have their highest conviction on local rates and maintain an overweight stance, reflecting the potential for rate cuts due to weakening growth and inflation, along with high nominal and above-average real yields. The fund maintains a bias against emerging market currency, but tactically moved to a neutral position towards the tail end of the period as the euro started to strengthen against the US dollar.

Fidelity Funds

Euro Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 1,176 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European bond markets witnessed volatility over the period, driven by high inflation, interest rate hikes and a slowdown in economic activity. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, supply chain disruptions, an energy crisis and COVID-19-related lockdowns in China earlier in the year exacerbated the challenging backdrop. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Credit Suisse led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the expected energy crisis failed to materialise, and investors turned optimistic on positive corporate results and China's economic reopening.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. The interest rate risk exposure was the primary detractor from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly. Meanwhile, credit exposure and coupon income contributed to returns. At a sector level, the allocation to banks, insurance and utility names supported performance. Conversely, positioning in US Treasuries, quasi-sovereign bonds and the energy sector held back gains. From an issuer perspective, Bouygues and BASF were among the leading performers, while Credit Suisse and UBS were the top detractors from returns.

The hawkish rhetoric of most major global central banks led investors to expect a hard landing globally. However, the managers believed a soft landing was a more likely scenario, and thus continued to add credit risk and favoured euro investment grade bonds for their attractive valuations. The managers preferred long credit positions and managed interest rate sensitivity in a tactical and nimble manner. In terms of government spreads, the managers remain underweight in all European countries except Germany. They believe that the economy cannot deal with rates significantly above 1.5% and expect the central bank will pivot soon. Consequently, the managers favour a long duration position in the portfolio.

Euro Short Term Bond Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 2,976 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European bond markets witnessed volatility over the period, driven by high inflation, interest rate hikes and a slowdown in economic activity. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, supply chain disruptions, an energy crisis and COVID-19-related lockdowns in China earlier in the year exacerbated the challenging backdrop. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. More recently, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Credit Suisse led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. On a positive note, the expected energy crisis failed to materialise, and investors turned optimistic on positive corporate results and China's economic reopening.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the review period, primarily due to its credit strategy. Meanwhile, the positioning along the euro curve and coupon income contributed to returns. At a sector level, the exposure to banks, property, basic industry and utility names contributed to performance. Conversely, positioning in US Treasuries, and quasi-sovereign bonds held back gains. From an issuer perspective, Celanese Corp and Commerzbank were among the leading performers, while Blackstone Property and Credit Suisse were the top detractors from returns.

The hawkish rhetoric of most major global central banks led investors to expect a hard landing globally. However, the managers believed a soft landing was a more likely scenario, and thus continued to add credit risk and favoured euro investment grade bonds for their attractive valuations. The managers preferred long credit positions and managed interest rate sensitivity in a tactical and nimble manner. In terms of government spreads, the managers remain underweight in all European countries except Germany. They believe that the economy cannot deal with rates significantly above 1.5% and expect the central bank will pivot soon. Consequently, the managers favour a long duration position in the portfolio.

European High Yield Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 2,172 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European high yield bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. An energy crisis in Europe and no signs of de-escalation in the Russia-Ukraine conflict exacerbated an already challenging macroeconomic backdrop. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. From a sector perspective, the bias towards energy and banks & brokers weighed on performance, while the underweight stance in consumer cyclicals and consumer non-cyclicals added relative value. From an issuer perspective, holdings in Adlerr and Scholler Packaging held back gains, while the exposure to Ozon and DTEK Finance were among the leading performers. From a rating perspective, all buckets ended in negative territory, except for holdings in BBB & above rated bonds, which added value.

The managers maintain a neutral stance on European high yield bond as a crisis of confidence in the banking sector remains. However, the conviction in banks remains high and sectors such as real estate that need refinancing will continue to trade more weakly compared to other sectors. Meanwhile, valuations, which are currently in the middle of the historical range, pose a challenge. However, breakeven spreads are sufficiently high to protect investors from negative returns. The primary market has started to perform well, with numerous deals in the pipeline. Although it is still largely a buyers' market, the allegiance to high coupon bonds remains in focus.

Flexible Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : GBP 143 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the review period. The interest rate risk exposure was the primary detractor from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. Meanwhile, credit exposure and coupon income contributed to returns. Skewing the portfolio towards bonds that offer high coupon income helped to generate an attractive income. At a sector level, the exposure to utility and financials contributed to returns, while positions in energy held back gains. From an issuer perspective, Longfor Holdings and EnfraGen were among the leading performers, while Sino Ocean Land Treasure and Petrofac were among the top detractors from returns.

Looking ahead, key central banks may keep interest rates 'higher for longer' to deal with continuing pressure from wages and prices. However, this will increase the pressure on financial systems in the form of higher borrowing costs for corporates and tighter financial conditions, thereby increasing the risk of a recession across developed markets. Against this backdrop, the managers reduced the fund's credit risk, especially via high yield bonds and emerging market debt, while selectively adding exposure to investment grade bonds. They also used the rally in yields due to the banking sector crisis in March to take profits and trim headline duration, but retained a preference for US-dollar and euro duration.

Global Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,407 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted negative returns but underperformed the index over the period. At a sector level, the exposure to banks and brokers, and basic industry credits weighed on returns, while the overweight allocation to other financials and energy credits added value. At an issuer level, holdings in Cellnex Telecom SA and HSBC Holdings plc enhanced gains. The interest rate risk exposure also aided performance due to the short duration positions in the Japanese yen as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period.

The managers expect volatility to remain elevated as key central banks may continue to tighten their policy rates until labour markets have cooled enough to bring inflation down. Keeping interest rates high for a longer period will increase the pressure on financial systems in the form of higher borrowing costs for corporates and tighter financial conditions, which would increase the risk of a recession across developed markets. Besides, the credit crunch in the banking sector following the banking turmoil could lead to tighter lending standards, which would weigh on credit growth going forwards. Against this backdrop, the managers remain defensive and prefer government bonds over corporate bonds, and remain tactical and nimble with their exposure to credit.

Fidelity Funds

Global Corporate Bond Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 230 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Credit positioning and term structure positioning detracted from returns amid widening credit spreads and higher sovereign yields. The exposure to sectors such as other financials and technology and communications were the primary detractors from performance. At an issuer level, overweight holdings in Intu (SGS) Finance PLC and MPT Operating Partnership held back gains. The interest rate risk exposure also detracted from performance as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. Within ratings, BBB and below rated credits detracted the most from returns.

Higher interest rates will continue to impact consumer and corporate balance sheets in the form of higher borrowing costs for corporates and tighter financial conditions, which would increase the risk of a recession. In addition, investors remain concerned about a credit crunch in the banking sector, which could lead to tighter lending standards, thus weighing on credit growth. Against this backdrop, the managers remain defensively positioned in investment grade bonds, with a small long position in beta on average. They continue to lower the beta to bring it towards a more neutral position as risk premium is still likely to rise. In terms of credit ratings, the managers remain overweight in BBB and BB bonds due to their attractive yield levels.

Fidelity Funds

Global High Yield Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 189 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global high yield bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. An energy crisis in Europe and no signs of de-escalation in the Russia-Ukraine conflict exacerbated an already challenging macroeconomic backdrop. Markets recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, but sentiment soon turned negative amid stronger economic data from the US. Markets fell further in March due to the crisis of confidence in the global banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the period, primarily due to its unfavourable credit strategy and lower coupon income. From a sector perspective, the underweight stance in property and communications weighed on returns, while the bias against government related and other financials added value. From an issuer perspective, the underweight positions in Unifin Financiera and Digicel Group Holdings were among the leading performers, while the overweight exposure to CIFI Holdings and VTR Comunicaciones Spa held back gains. The bias against Country Garden Holdings also detracted from performance. From a ratings perspective, holdings in B rated bonds weighed the most on returns.

Higher interest rates, wider credit spreads and tightened credit standards will continue to dominate the market in an uncertain macroeconomic environment. April witnessed a revival in primary markets, with a wide variety of issuers accessing the new issue market. However, the high yield maturity wall does not pose an imminent concern. Within the rating bucket, low-quality bonds such as CCCs outperformed in light of inverted yield curves and a reduction in banking system stress, while dispersion fell significantly. The managers maintain a neutral stance on the overall asset class and continue to focus on coupon income via their credit selection strategy to avoid company-specific pitfalls.

Global Hybrids Bond Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 127 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global high yield bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. An energy crisis in Europe and no signs of de-escalation in the Russia-Ukraine conflict exacerbated an already challenging macroeconomic backdrop. Markets recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, but sentiment soon turned negative amid stronger economic data from the US. Markets fell further in March due to the crisis of confidence in the global banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund posted negative returns but outperformed the index over the period, primarily due its favourable credit strategy. From a sector perspective, the underweight allocation to insurance and quasi-sovereign bonds, as well as the bias towards banks & brokers contributed to performance, while the exposure to other financials weighed on returns. From an issuer perspective, holdings in Deutsche Bank and UniCredit SpA were among the leading performers, while the overweight allocation to Credit Suisse and Banco de Credito Social Cooperativo held back gains.

Higher interest rates, wider credit spreads and tightened credit standards will continue to dominate the market in an uncertain macroeconomic environment. April witnessed a revival in primary markets, with a wide variety of issuers accessing the new issue market. However, the high yield maturity wall does not pose an imminent concern. Within the rating bucket, low-quality bonds such as CCCs outperformed in light of inverted yield curves and a reduction in banking system stress, while dispersion fell significantly. The managers maintain a neutral stance on global high yield. With respect to global hybrids, additional Tier 1 (AT1) bonds look very attractive given the recent repricing following Credit Suisse's write down, but fundamentals remain strong. The managers also remain neutral on corporate hybrids bonds, given their relatively more resilient performance. They continue to favour fundamentally strong and large national banks.

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted negative returns over the review period. On the credit front, credit spread widening weighed on returns. Encouragingly, skewing the portfolio towards bonds that offer high coupon income helped to generate an attractive income. At a sector level, positions in property weighed on performance, while the exposure to consumer cyclicals and financials added value. From an issuer perspective, Wanda Properties and Petrofac were among the top detractors from returns, while United Airlines and FMG Resources were among the leading performers. The interest rate risk exposure also held back gains as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period.

The managers actively managed the fund's duration exposure to take advantage of higher yields, but ended roughly flat over the year. In the near term, key central banks may continue to tighten policy rates until labour markets have cooled enough to bring inflation in line with their target range. However, keeping interest rates high for a longer period will increase the pressure on financial systems in the form of higher borrowing costs for corporates and tighter financial conditions, thereby increasing the risk of a recession across developed markets. Against this backdrop, the managers remain defensively positioned and continue to focus on security selection and alpha opportunities.

Global Inflation-linked Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 2,101 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. An energy crisis in Europe and no signs of de-escalation in the Russia-Ukraine conflict exacerbated an already challenging macroeconomic backdrop. Markets recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, but sentiment soon turned negative amid stronger economic data from the US. Markets fell further in March due to the crisis of confidence in the global banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the comparative index over the period. Global breakevens in most developed markets weighed on the asset class from an inflation risk perspective. The rise in real yields hurt returns, but was partially offset by the lower duration stance as well as by the fund's active breakeven and real duration positions. The cross-market duration strategy (where the team go long and short developed market rates, while staying beta-neutral to minimise directional interest rate risk) supported returns, as did the cross-market developed market currency strategy.

The managers continue to believe that inflation will fall sharply, but remain slightly higher over the long-term compared to pre-COVID-19 levels, due to structural factors such de-globalisation and decarbonisation. The long positions in US and UK 10-year breakevens were retained, as the managers believe that inflation could prove to be more persistent than expected. They have a long US and short euro long-term inflation expectation cross-market position, as euro breakevens look expensive compared to US breakevens given that inflation in the eurozone is likely to be lower than in the US over the long term. In terms of real duration, the managers continue to see longer term value in US real duration. They added to the UK real duration position after taking profits on their long position.

Fidelity Funds

Structured Credit Income Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 36 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European credit markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. An energy crisis in Europe and no signs of de-escalation in the Russia-Ukraine conflict exacerbated an already challenging macroeconomic backdrop. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund was launched in July 2022 and outperformed the European Short-Term Rate index over the period since launch. Favourable yield component and credit selection supported performance. On the ratings front, the allocation to BBB rated securities added the most value.

The fund invests primarily in a diversified portfolio of high-quality collateralised loan obligation tranches, asset-backed securities, commercial mortgage-backed securities and residential mortgage-backed securities, mostly rated investment grade. The target is to provide an annualised return of European Short-Term Rate + 4% across the market cycle.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Asian Bond Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 18 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US dollar denominated Asian investment grade and high yield bonds posted negative returns during the period. External demand remained weak in 2022 amid rising global recession risks, sticky inflation and persistent geopolitical tensions. However, demand started to pickup in 2023 as China relaxed its zero COVID-19 policy and markets weighed the prospect of increased tourism and consumer spending as Chinese officials highlighted that its worst battle with COVID-19 may be over. The Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) readings of Asian countries remained resilient towards the end of the period, as new orders piled up and as the region became more optimistic about the boost from China's reopening. Elsewhere, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) continued its hiking cycle with a series of interest rate hikes over the period, and maintained its hawkish stance.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the period. Credit selection held back gains, while stable coupon income and term structure positioning contributed to returns. An overweight stance in Chinese property and underweight position in Chinese quasi-sovereigns weighed on returns. On a positive note, the overweight exposure to Thailand, Japanese and Hong Kong banks & brokers added value.

Following a volatile period, the market settled down at a new equilibrium, and is now reflecting a higher risk of recession with wider credit spreads and lower US Treasury yields. In the Asian investment grade bonds space, the picture is less worrying, as much of the current global growth remains in Asia. Although Asia may not be completely insulated from global headwinds, supportive fundamentals suggest that there are attractive opportunities. Within Asia, the managers remain positive on China given the continued policy support by the government. Outside of China, they remain overweight in lower-beta countries including Korea, Hong Kong and Japan, and underweight in higher-beta countries including Indonesia, India and the Philippines. The managers continue to favour high-quality issuers with better environmental, social and governance (ESG) characteristics including lower carbon emitters.

Sustainable Climate Bond Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 132 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the review period. Interest rate risk exposure held back gains as sovereign bond yields rose significantly. Furthermore, credit exposure detracted from returns as credit spreads widened, while losses were partly offset by coupon income. At the sector level, positions in consumer non-cyclical and energy weighed on performance, while holdings in utility and insurance added value. From an issuer perspective, Enel SpA and Canary Wharf Group Investment Holdings PLC were among the top detractors from performance, while Autodesk Inc and Credit Suisse were among the top contributors to returns.

Higher interest rates will continue to impact consumer and corporate balance sheets in the form of higher borrowing costs for corporates and tighter financial conditions, which would increase the risk of a recession. In addition, investors remain concerned about a credit crunch in the banking sector, which could lead to tighter lending standards, thus weighing on credit growth and the developed market economy. Against this backdrop, the managers remain defensively positioned, with a small, long position in beta on average. The managers continue to lower the portfolio's beta to bring it towards a more neutral position as the risk premium is likely to rise. Bottom-up credit selection remains critical. In terms of credit ratings, the managers remain overweight in BBB and BB bonds due to their attractive yield levels.

Fidelity Funds

Sustainable Strategic Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 538 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the review period. The interest rate risk exposure was the primary driver of negative returns as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. Meanwhile, credit exposure and coupon income contributed to returns. Skewing the portfolio towards bonds that offer high coupon income helped to generate an attractive income. At a sector level, the exposure to utility and financials contributed to returns, while positions in energy held back gains. From an issuer perspective, Longfor Holdings and EnfraGen were among the leading performers, while Sino Ocean Land Treasure and Petrofac were among the top detractors from returns.

Looking ahead, key central banks may keep interest rates 'higher for longer' to deal with continuing pressure from wages and prices. However, this will increase the pressure on financial systems in the form of higher borrowing costs for corporates and tighter financial conditions, thereby increasing the risk of a recession across developed markets. Against this backdrop, the managers reduced the fund's credit risk, especially via high yield bonds and emerging market debt, while selectively adding exposure to investment grade bonds. They also used the rally in yields due to the banking sector crisis in March to take profits and trim headline duration, but retained a preference for US-dollar and euro duration.

Sustainable US High Yield Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 41 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US high yield bond markets remained volatile but registered positive returns over the period. Markets battled with elevated inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. An energy crisis in Europe and no signs of de-escalation in the Russia-Ukraine conflict exacerbated an already challenging macroeconomic backdrop. Markets recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, but sentiment soon turned negative amid stronger economic data from the US. Markets fell further in March due to the crisis of confidence in the global banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund posted positive returns but outperformed the index over the period, primarily due to lower coupon income. However, its favourable credit strategy enhanced gains. From a sector perspective, an overweight allocation to consumer non-cyclicals and technology, as well as the underweight stance in communications and consumer cyclicals contributed to performance. For instance, the underweight positions in Ligado Networks and CSC Holdings added value. Conversely, the bias towards the basic industry and energy sectors weighed on returns. For instance, holdings in Trinseo Materials Operating and Petrofac Ltd held back gains. From a ratings perspective, all buckets ended in positive territory.

The managers expect mixed performance going forward due to elevated rates volatility and earnings uncertainty, which are likely to create fertile ground for more dispersion and decompression in the second half of 2023 from current subdued levels. Unlike the past downturns, where distress was concentrated in one particular sector, this time the distress ratio in a number of sectors is elevated given over-levered balance sheets and sector-specific headwinds. Higher interest rates, wider credit spreads and tightened credit standards will continue to dominate the market in an uncertain macroeconomic environment. Thus, the managers remain defensive and maintain a neutral stance in the asset class.

US Dollar Bond Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 2,746 MILLION

Manager's Overview

US bond markets remained volatile over the period, given elevated inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, but sentiment soon turned negative amid stronger economic data from the US. Markets fell further in March due to the crisis of confidence in the global banking system. Volatility subsided somewhat after central bank authorities calmed investors by showing their confidence in the banking sector.

The fund posted negative returns and underperformed the index over the review period. Interest rate risk exposure held back gains as sovereign bond yields rose significantly over the period. In contrast, credit exposure and coupon income supported returns. At the sector level, positions in banks and brokers and insurance contributed to performance, while holdings in basic industry and consumer non-cyclicals held back gains. From an issuer perspective, Barclays Bank and HSBC Bank were among the top contributors to returns, while Natwest Group and Credit Suisse hampered performance.

The managers believe that the US Federal Reserve is approaching the end of its current hiking cycle and see current levels as a buying opportunity. They maintain a small, long bias towards US Treasuries and an overweight duration stance at the long end of the curve. However, the managers continue to have a nimble approach when it comes to duration positioning in light of elevated volatility. Given moves in other markets, they also maintain some conviction exposure to other Group of 10 (G10) regions such as Europe, Australia and the UK. The managers moved to a more neutral stance on investment grade corporate bonds, largely driven by higher funding costs and consumers' lower propensity to spend in the US. Sector and name selection will remain key performance drivers in 2023, and the managers' primary focus is on quality and liquidity. The fund maintains a long bias towards the financials sector due to valuations, which still look attractive. However, the managers have started to trim some of this exposure in anticipation of increased supply over the coming months.

Manager's Overview

The European Central Bank (ECB) raised benchmark interest rates multiple times over the period in order to control soaring inflation. Inflation in the region accelerated during the period, remaining well above the ECB's 2.0% target. Central bank officials reiterated that future monetary policy decisions will be data-dependent, and ECB President Christine Lagarde stated that "there's still a little way to go on the path" to bring inflation closer to the central bank's target rate. On the data front, business activity in the eurozone continued to accelerate in April, with the flash eurozone composite Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) reaching an 11-month high of 54.4. A recovery in demand, faster growth in new orders and the largest increase in employment in nearly a year supported growth. However, growth has become increasingly unbalanced, driven largely by the service sector. While the eurozone's manufacturing PMI came in slightly ahead of expectations at 45.8 in April, the contraction means that output declined once again following a couple of months of marginal growth. Nonetheless, optimism for the year ahead remained resilient and above the lows seen towards the end of 2022.

The fund prioritised yield enhancement along with security of capital and a strong liquidity profile, while adhering to its strict credit quality guidelines. The managers hold a large portion of the portfolio in highly liquid securities, in accordance with the key aim of maintaining liquidity and capital preservation. At the end of the review period, the fund's weighted average maturity (WAM) stood at 17 days.

The portfolio strategy remains conservative. The focus on credit quality remains high, with exposure to issuers rated Aa3 or higher at 49%. The portfolio is also well diversified across regions. A high level of liquidity is maintained, with approximately 69% of net assets maturing in 7 days or less.

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 1,723 MILLION

Manager's Overview

The US Federal Reserve (Fed) raised benchmark interest rates multiple times over the period in order to control soaring inflation. However, towards the latter part of the period, cooling headline inflation data raised hopes that the central bank may be nearing the end of its tightening cycle. From a macroeconomic standpoint, first quarter GDP growth came in at 1.1% annualised, significantly below expectations of 2.0%. The slowdown was perpetuated by weak business investment and a pullback in inventories. Meanwhile, strong consumer spending reflected gains in both goods and services, including a surge in purchases of motor vehicles. The unemployment rate marginally decreased to 3.5% in March from 3.6% in February. The Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) price index for March fell to 4.2% on an annualised basis from 5.1% in February. The S&P Global US manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) returned to expansionary territory, coming in at 50.2 in April for the first time since October 2022.

The fund prioritised security of capital and a strong liquidity profile along with yield enhancement, while adhering to its strict credit quality guidelines. The managers hold a large portion of the portfolio in highly liquid securities in accordance with the key aim of maintaining liquidity and capital preservation. At the end of the review period, the fund's weighted average maturity (WAM) stood at 37 days.

The portfolio strategy remains conservative. The focus on credit quality remains high, with the exposure to issuers rated Aa3 or higher at 51%. The portfolio is also well diversified across regions. A high level of liquidity is maintained, with 62% of net assets maturing in 7 days or less.

Fidelity Target™ 2020 Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 13 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. As inflation remained high, global central banks delivered rate hikes in February and March 2023. Markets turned volatile in March following the collapse of US-based Silicon Valley Bank, which led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. The significant market turmoil in March led to investors recalibrating the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the year-to-date period in 2023, following a dismal 2022.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year as expenses outweighed the positive contribution from cash instruments.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. In line with this, the fund remains fully invested in cash and short-term instruments.

Fidelity Target™ 2020 (Euro) Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 58 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. As inflation remained high, global central banks delivered rate hikes in February and March 2023. Markets turned volatile in March following the collapse of US-based Silicon Valley Bank, which led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. The significant market turmoil in March led to investors recalibrating the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the year-to-date period in 2023, following a dismal 2022.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. A customised short duration and high-quality credit strategy was used to implement the cash exposure. The rationale for using this strategy as opposed to a traditional money market strategy was the prevailing negative Euro cash rate environment. However, given extreme market movements during the period as well as the monetary tightening by the European Central Bank, even small duration and credit positions led to larger than expected drawdowns. Cash rates turned positive during the period, allowing the managers to de-risk into cash.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. In line with this, the fund remains fully invested in cash and short-term instruments.

Fidelity Target™ 2025 (Euro) Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 242 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined in euro terms as the euro appreciated against the US dollar and yen. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major global central banks tightened policies to curb inflation. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in the fixed income segment and US equities weighed on returns. In particular, the underlying Euro bond strategy detracted from performance due to its term structure positioning. Within equities, the underlying US core strategy weighed on returns in light of security selection in the financials and communication services sectors. Meanwhile, the exposure to Sustainable Asia equity fund added value, supported by security selection in the financials and consumer discretionary sectors.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the exposure to equities was reduced, while the allocation to cash and bonds was increased.

Fidelity Target™ 2030 (Euro) Fund

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 346 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined in euro terms as the euro appreciated against the US dollar and yen. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major global central banks tightened policies to curb inflation. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with rising inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity but recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in Europe and US equities weighed on returns. In particular, the underlying US core strategy detracted from performance due to security selection in the financials and communication services sectors. Meanwhile, the exposure to emerging market equities added value, led by the Sustainable Asia equity fund, supported by security selection in the financials sector. Within fixed income, the underlying Euro bond strategy weighed on returns due to its term structure positioning.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the exposure to equities was reduced, while the allocation to cash and bonds was increased.

Fidelity Target™ 2055 (Euro) Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 13 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined in euro terms as the euro appreciated against the US dollar and yen. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major global central banks tightened policies to curb inflation. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with rising inflation, interest rate hikes and a subsequent slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors turned hopeful of a slower pace of monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. Strategy selection in European and US equities weighed on returns. In particular, the underlying US core strategy detracted from performance due to security selection in the financials and communication services sectors. The underlying European value income strategy also weighed on returns. Meanwhile, the exposure to emerging markets equities added value, led by the Sustainable Asia Equity fund, supported by security selection in the financials sector.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model, which will consist of 100% cash at maturity. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the exposure to European, Japanese, Canadian and US equities was reduced, while holdings in Asia Pacific ex-Japan and emerging market equities were raised. Elsewhere, the allocation to cash was increased.

Fidelity Institutional Target™ 2015 (Euro) Fund [1,4,5]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 2 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities ended higher in US dollar and local currency terms but ended lower in euro terms due to the appreciation of the euro against the US dollar and yen. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened their monetary policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors became hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. US and European equities weighed on returns. In particular, the Fidelity Sustainable Research Enhanced US equity exchange traded fund (ETF) retreated due to security selection in the materials sector. The Fidelity Europe equities strategy also hurt performance due to security selection in the health care sector. Meanwhile, the Fidelity Euro Short Term Bond strategy added value supported by its yield component. Elsewhere, the allocation to cash weighed on returns.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash, and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, all of the fund's holdings were moved to cash.

Fidelity Institutional Target™ 2035 (Euro) Fund [1,4,5]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 421 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities ended higher in US dollar and local currency terms but ended lower in euro terms due to the appreciation of the euro against the US dollar and yen. Markets fell over the first half of the period as major central banks tightened their monetary policies to curb inflation and as global growth weakened. Geopolitical risks arising from the Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on markets. Equities recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually force major central banks to pursue less restrictive policies. Fixed income markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity, but recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023 as risk sentiment improved. Credit markets appeared resilient as investors became hopeful of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals.

The fund underperformed the comparative index over the year. US and European equities weighed on returns. In particular, the Fidelity Sustainable Research Enhanced US equity exchange traded fund (ETF) retreated due to security selection in the materials and real estate sectors. The Fidelity Europe equities strategy also hurt performance due to security selection in the health care sector. Strategy selection in alternatives further detracted from performance. Meanwhile, the Fidelity US Dollar Bond strategy added value, led by favourable credit selection. Elsewhere, the allocation to cash weighed on returns.

The fund follows a dynamic asset allocation model. The monthly migration path towards the final portfolio is set to have an increasing exposure to bonds and cash and a decreasing weight in equities over time until maturity. Over the period, the allocation to equities and cash was increased, while the exposure to bonds was reduced.

Fidelity Funds

Multi Asset Target Income 2024 Fund [1,4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 28 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose in US dollar and sterling terms, but were marginally negative in euro terms. Concerns over rising inflation and interest rates weighed on markets. Equities fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Markets recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually lead to less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. Global bond markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity.

The fund generated negative returns over the review period. The investment process evolved in May 2021 to meet the portfolio's defensive total return outcome. The fund does not use a comparative index for performance purposes. The allocation to investment grade bonds suffered as a result of the rise in government bond yields and the widening of credit spreads. The Alpha component also weighed on returns due to the allocation to the systematic global macro strategy. Positioning in US Treasuries and equities within the portfolio's Core component was reduced, while the allocation to the investment grade credit segment was increased.

Fidelity Funds

Absolute Return Asian Equity Fund [4,5]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 9 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Regional equities advanced over the review period. Optimism over China's reopening and the ensuing economic recovery supported sentiment; however, these gains were partially offset by increasing geopolitical tensions between the US and China. Investor sentiment was undermined by inflationary pressures and recessionary risk over most of the period. Markets reassessed their expectations for the peak in global interest rates as targeted inflation remained high across most global regions. The recent turmoil in the global banking sector and fears of contagion also added to market volatility.

The fund delivered positive returns over the period. In the utilities sector, the holding in National Hydroelectric Power, India's largest hydro utility, added value given its strong regulated returns and attractive dividends. The allocation to Indonesia's Bank Mandiri Persero proved rewarding. It is preferred as a high-quality bank with a strong deposit franchise and attractive dividend yield. Against the backdrop of a rising interest rate environment, private lender HDFC Bank added notable value. Conversely, selected consumer names in China held back gains amid concerns over slowing consumption. Positions in e-commerce company Jd.com and sportswear brand Li Ning slid.

The fund aims to generate positive absolute returns while investing in the Asia ex Japan region by focussing on maximising stock specific risks and managing macroeconomic risks to the minimum. This is done by creating a portfolio of a similar number of long and short positions. In line with the bottom-up stock selection approach, the fund has long positions in restructuring candidates where the managers find catalysts for an improvement in returns; those that have global technology, scale or cost leadership; and strong franchises that benefit from long-term structural drivers. Short positions are taken in companies that are mirror opposites, i.e. in companies with deteriorating fundamentals that are likely to witness a decline in domestic or global market share.

Fidelity Funds

Absolute Return Global Equity Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 57 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined (in euro terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March.

The fund delivered strong positive net returns over the period. As per the design of the strategy, returns were primarily driven by strong stock selection, though sector/regional allocation also added notable value. Stock selection in the consumer staples, financials and health care sectors coupled with the net long positioning in industrials added the most value. At a regional level, all geographies barring Pacific ex Japan were flat to positive, with North America, Europe and UK among the key contributors to performance. At a stock level, the position in industrial gases company Air Liquide rose after it reported an increase in 2022 net profits and sales. The increase in sales was primarily driven by the industrial merchant and electronics segments. All geographies within its gas and services business also posted growth, in particular the Americas and Asia Pacific.

The fund offers investors a diversified source of absolute returns. It gives exposure to the breadth and depth of Fidelity's fundamental research by maintaining long exposure to the highest conviction Buy rated companies and short exposure to the highest conviction Sell rated companies in a portfolio of around 150–200 stocks. This fund aims to deliver positive returns primarily through stock selection. It is market neutral, with no bias towards beta, style, country or sector. Offering a diversified return stream for investors, it is uncorrelated to market direction and has low correlation to other asset classes. This means that the fund should perform in a different way to other funds over a given time period and provide diversification benefits in a broader portfolio.

Fidelity Funds

Absolute Return Global Fixed Income Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 12 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global bond markets endured a volatile period due to soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity. Markets recovered some lost ground towards the end of 2022 and early 2023, as risk sentiment improved amid expectations of a slower pace of global monetary policy tightening and relatively stable corporate fundamentals. However, the banking sector crisis later in March led to fears over a broader contagion across the banking system. Consequently, investors recalibrated the future of rate hikes, thus allowing global government bonds to recover some lost ground over the period.

The fund posted slightly positive returns over the period. The discretionary part of the portfolio added value. Specifically, the long-short credit portfolio contributed to returns, while the long-short high yield credit portfolio held back gains.

The fund invests across the full suite of fixed income markets, exploiting opportunities in credit, rates and currencies, with a focus on relative value and non-directional positions in order to limit market risk factors. The team employs discretionary strategies utilising the full breadth and global reach of Fidelity's investment capabilities. The fund aims to deliver a cash plus 2% return over rolling annual periods in a controlled risk environment, while aiming to generate alpha in different market environments with a focus on downside protection. The fund looks to benefit from rising volatility via strategies that can exploit these environments (such as long/short) and maintains a low correlation with traditional asset classes.

Fidelity Funds

Absolute Return Multi Strategy Fund [4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 32 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities rose in US dollar and sterling terms, but were marginally negative in euro terms. Concerns over rising inflation and interest rates weighed on markets. Equities fell over the first half of the period as major central banks aggressively tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. Markets recovered losses in the second half of the period, as investors appeared to bet that slowing inflation and weakening global growth would eventually lead to less restrictive policies. That said, markets remained volatile as inflation remained higher than target levels, leading central banks to retain their hawkish stance. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets in March 2023 also intensified fears around global financial stability, though policymakers acted swiftly to manage contagion risks. Global bond markets endured a volatile period, with corporate bonds outperforming sovereign bonds. Markets battled with soaring inflation, unprecedented interest rate hikes by global central banks and a subsequent synchronised slowdown in global economic activity.

The fund generated positive returns over the review period. The Absolute Return Global Equity strategy, which is focused on capturing the highest conviction analyst stock recommendations, was the leading contributor to performance. Returns were primarily driven by strong stock selection, though sector/region allocation also boosted performance. Stock selection in consumer staples, financials and health care, coupled with net long positions in industrials added the most value. The fund was also supported by the position in the Absolute Return European Equity strategy. The exposure to the Systematic Global Macro strategy was the largest detractor from returns over the period. The position was trimmed. The allocation to cash was reduced, while holdings were purchased in the Global Macro Pool and Absolute Return European strategies.

Fidelity Funds

Institutional Emerging Markets Equity Fund [8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 161 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Emerging markets declined over the review period, amid ongoing geopolitical tensions, the continued impact of COVID-19 induced lockdowns in China and high global inflation. Markets were weighed down as the US Federal Reserve (Fed) signalled tighter financial conditions before moving decisively to raise rates to tame inflation. Emerging market central banks also moved early and aggressively to tighten their monetary policies, having noted that inflation was rising substantially above their respective targets, exacerbated by the war in Ukraine. Markets strengthened somewhat in the second half of the review period, supported by China's economic reopening and an easing regulatory stance towards the internet and property sectors, while a more risk-off environment emerged from March, in response to the geopolitical and regulatory developments in China and turmoil in the developed market banking sector.

The fund generated negative returns and underperformed the index over the period. Losses from China, Brazil and South Korea were partially offset by gains from India and Kazakhstan. At the sector level, stock picking within consumer staples and information technology (IT) hampered returns, but proved rewarding in the financials sector. Holdings operating in industries related to the Chinese property sector, such as Beijing Oriental Yuhong, were weak. Zhongsheng Group pulled back on concerns over consumer price sensitivity and diminished buying power. Financial holdings HDFC Bank and Kaspi KZ GDR were favoured for consistently reporting upbeat results over the year.

Global equities remain susceptible to a high level of macroeconomic uncertainty over the future path of the global economy and interest rates. Emerging markets still present compelling opportunities and the relative attractiveness of valuations compared to developed markets, particularly the US, creates good opportunities for strong returns from emerging market stocks over the long term. The fund owns well capitalised businesses with under-levered balance sheets, while being conservatively positioned in what will remain a challenging environment.

Fidelity Funds

Institutional European Larger Companies Fund [1,3,4,5,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 1,056 MILLION

Manager's Overview

European equities rose over the 12 months under review. At the start of the period, increasing concerns around inflation led to a more hawkish stance by most major central banks. The geopolitical crisis arising from the war in Ukraine remained a headwind. On a positive note, the anticipated energy crisis failed to materialise at the start of 2023, supported by falling natural gas prices amid a milder winter season. In March, the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank in the US, and the failure of Credit Suisse in Europe led to fears of wider contagion in the banking sector. Despite these concerns, investors were encouraged by positive corporate results, China's continued economic reopening and a further reduction in US headline inflation.

The fund underperformed the index over the period, with sector and style headwinds proving a drag on relative returns. Weak stock selection in the health care sector hampered performance, and the lack of exposure to Novo-Nordisk was a notable detractor from returns. Fresenius Medical Care also held back gains. The company reported strong FY 2022 results in February but downgraded its outlook for FY 2023. The holding in Vonovia was the biggest detractor from performance at the stock level, due to concerns over its debt levels in a rising interest rate environment. Some of these losses were offset by the exposure to Inditex. Its shares rose on the back of strong FY22 results in March, despite a slowdown in its top-line results in the fourth quarter of 2022.

The team prefers quality companies that are trading on attractive valuations. The fund typically does well when the valuation gap between the most and least expensive stocks narrows, given that it tends not to own the most expensive companies in the market. The portfolio is overweight in consumer staples, which is the largest sector exposure on both an absolute and a relative basis. This is a function of the sector having a number of good quality businesses, some of which are close to multi-year low valuations due to fears over input cost inflation. The team is watching for opportunities that have significant mid-term potential, but are being negatively impacted by short-term worries.

Fidelity Funds

Institutional Global Focus Fund [4,8]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : USD 152 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities declined (in EUR terms) during the period. Markets were characterised by heightened volatility and sharp shifts in sector and style preferences as investors attempted to come to terms with persistent recessionary fears, decades-high inflation, aggressive interest rate hikes by central banks, the energy crisis in Europe, the UK government's unfunded fiscal stimulus and more recently the banking crisis in the US. The banking sector saw a period of significant volatility, as the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank (SVB) and Signature Bank, followed by further financial sector disruption in the US and Europe, led to a sharp decline in markets in the first half of March. Against this backdrop, Europe outperformed other regional markets. From a sector perspective, energy was the top performer, tracking crude oil prices higher after the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies (OPEC+) unexpectedly announced production cuts of more than 1 million barrels per day, aimed at stabilising oil prices at around USD 80 a barrel. Meanwhile, materials was among the notable laggards.

The fund performed in line with the comparative index over the period. While consumer discretionary holdings weighed on returns, financials names buoyed performance. At a stock level, certain growth stocks such as Amazon.com and Alphabet (A) fell, underscoring the growing pressure on digital ad spending, revenue growth and rising labour costs. Shares in e-commerce and payment services player Alibaba Group Holding detracted from returns. The underweight stance in Apple also held back relative gains. Its shares rose amid expectations that it would move into the rapidly expanding augmented reality arena. Conversely, the lack of exposure to Tesla contributed to performance, as the stock declined following disappointing quarterly earnings and subdued margins. General Electric reported stronger than expected quarterly earnings, due to robust orders in ultrasound and imaging. Arthur J Gallaghar outperformed in light of its strong top-line revenue growth and positive momentum in new businesses.

The fund invests in two categories of stocks – compounders and transformers. Holdings in the compounders category typically have defensive characteristics, enjoy some pricing power and/or have secular growth opportunities. Transformers are businesses that are either witnessing high cyclical growth or are special situations. At a sector level, the fund maintains a significant overweight in high quality businesses within the financials sector, which stands to benefit from interest rate hikes, a strengthening regulatory backdrop, secular growth drivers and the potential for market penetration, especially in emerging markets. At a stock level, Google's parent company Alphabet is the top active position in the portfolio.

Fidelity Funds

Institutional Global Sector Fund [3,4]

FUND SIZE AS AT 30.04.2023 : EUR 241 MILLION

Manager's Overview

Global equities ended higher over the review period. Markets were under pressure over the first half of the period as major central banks tightened policies to curb elevated inflation and as global growth weakened. The Russia-Ukraine conflict and the resultant energy crisis in Europe further weighed on equities. Markets rebounded in the second half, as easing inflation and slowing growth raised hopes that major central banks will pursue less restrictive policies. That said, volatility persisted as central banks retained their hawkish stance owing to higher than target inflation. Turmoil in the banking sector in developed markets also worried investors. Against this backdrop, Europe ex UK equities rose strongly, as positive economic surprises supported a rebound in the latter part of the period. UK, Japan and US stocks also advanced. At a sector level, energy, industrials and information technology were among the leading gainers.

The fund outperformed the comparative index over the period. An underweight position in the materials sector contributed to returns, as the sector ended lower amid weak commodity prices as well as slowing global growth. Security selection within the underlying strategies in the consumer and industrial sectors also supported performance. However, an underweight allocation to the energy sector weighed on relative returns. The sector performed positively against the backdrop of some better-than-expected earnings reports, production cuts by major crude oil producers to support prices and fears around the energy situation in Europe.

Over the period, the managers reduced the exposure to strategies focused on the economically sensitive financials and industrials sectors in view of recession risks. Instead, they added to the global health care strategy as the sector is less sensitive to decelerating economic growth. The managers also recently added to the consumer strategy, due to an improved outlook for consumer spending in China after the country relaxed its COVID-19 related restrictions and in Europe in view of falling energy prices.
