Vanguard Global Corporate Bond Index Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC.

Investment Objective

The fund seeks to provide returns consistent with the performance of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Float Adjusted Corporate Index Hedged, a market-weighted index of global corporate fixed income investments with maturities greater than 1 year.

Performance Summary (unaudited)

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements.

- The period was defined by a historic rise in interest rates, which caused ripple effects across every sector of the financial markets and brought with it renewed volatility.
- Russia's invasion of Ukraine added to inflationary pressures from ongoing supply-chain bottlenecks and labour shortages in some sectors of the economy, lifting year-on-year inflation readings to multidecade highs across much of the world. While energy prices eventually began to cool, price increases broadened to other categories of goods and services, heightening concerns that inflation might remain stubbornly high.
- In response, major central banks wound down their bond-purchasing programs and began raising short-term interest rates. The US Federal Reserve was especially aggressive, raising the federal funds rate target from near zero in March 2022 to a range of 4.25%–4.5% by the end of the year.
- Global fixed income markets had an especially tough year, with bond yields in major economies moving sharply higher across the maturity spectrum. Global bonds ended the 12 months down roughly 16% in US dollars, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index.
- The fund's benchmark, which is hedged to the US dollar, returned –14.11% for the 12 months ended 31 December 2022.
- By country, the United States, which has the largest weighting in the index, underperformed the index as a whole, as did Belgium and the United Kingdom. Other index heavyweights including Japan, Spain and Canada fared better but still ended the period in negative territory.
- By sector, bonds issued by financial institutions weighed less on performance than those of industrial and utility companies.
- By maturity, shorter-dated bonds held up better than their longer-dated counterparts. From a credit-quality perspective, results were mixed.

All of the returns in this report represent past performance, which is not a guarantee of future results that may be achieved by the fund. For performance data current to the most recent month-end, which may be higher or lower than that cited, visit our website at <http://global.vanguard.com>. Note, too, that both investment returns and principal value can fluctuate widely, so an investor's shares, when sold, could be worth more or less than their original cost.

* The tracking difference between the fund return and the index return over a stated period of time can be attributed to a number of factors, including, without limitation, small differences in weightings, trading activity, swing pricing, transaction costs and differences in the valuation and withholding tax treatment between the fund and the index vendor.

Vanguard Global Credit Bond Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC.

Investment Objective

This fund seeks to provide a moderate and sustainable level of current income by investing in a diversified portfolio of global credit fixed income bonds.

Performance Summary (unaudited)

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements. The fund is actively managed and seeks to invest as described in the prospectus. The following performance information shows how the fund's returns compare with those of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Credit Index Hedged, a market index that has investment characteristics similar to those of the fund.

- The period was defined by a historic rise in interest rates, which caused ripple effects across every sector of the financial markets and brought with it renewed volatility.
- Russia's invasion of Ukraine added to inflationary pressures from ongoing supply-chain bottlenecks and labour shortages in some sectors of the economy, lifting year-on-year inflation readings to multidecade highs across much of the world. While energy prices eventually began to cool, price increases broadened to other categories of goods and services, heightening concerns that inflation might remain stubbornly high.
- In response, major central banks wound down their bond-purchasing programs and began raising short-term interest rates. The US Federal Reserve was especially aggressive, raising the federal funds rate target from near zero in March 2022 to a range of 4.25%–4.5% by the end of the year.
- Global fixed income markets had an especially tough year, with bond yields in major economies moving sharply higher across the maturity spectrum. Global bonds returned about –16% in US dollars, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index.
- For the 12 months ended 31 December 2022, the fund performed better than its benchmark, which returned –14.22%.
- Emerging-market country positioning and issuer selection drove performance; being underweight to Russia prior to its invasion of Ukraine contributed notably.
- Selection in government bonds, North American investment-grade issuers and European A-rated-and-above financial issuers also boosted performance.

Benchmark returns in the commentary above are in US dollars.

Vanguard Global Short-Term Bond Index Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC, and sub-managed by Vanguard Investments Australia Ltd.

Investment Objective

This fund seeks to provide returns consistent with the performance of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Ex US MBS 1–5 Year Float Adjusted and Scaled Index, a market-weighted index of global government, government-related agency, corporate and securitised bonds, excluding US mortgage-backed securities, with maturities between 1 and 5 years.

Performance Summary (unaudited)

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements.

- The period was defined by a historic rise in interest rates, which caused ripple effects across every sector of the financial markets and brought with it renewed volatility.
- Russia's invasion of Ukraine added to inflationary pressures from ongoing supply-chain bottlenecks and labour shortages in some sectors of the economy, lifting year-on-year inflation readings to multidecade highs across much of the world. While energy prices eventually began to cool, price increases broadened to other categories of goods and services, heightening concerns that inflation might remain stubbornly high.
- In response, major central banks wound down their bond-purchasing programs and began raising short-term interest rates. The US Federal Reserve was especially aggressive, raising the federal funds rate target from near zero in March 2022 to a range of 4.25%–4.5% by the end of the year.
- Global fixed income markets had an especially tough year, with bond yields in major economies moving sharply higher across the maturity spectrum. Global bonds ended the 12 months down roughly 16% in US dollars, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index.
- The fund's benchmark, which is hedged to the US dollar, returned –5.12% for the 12 months ended 31 December 2022.
- By country, the United States, which has the largest weighting in the index, slightly underperformed the index as a whole. Austria, Belgium and the Netherlands were also laggards. Other index heavyweights including Japan, South Korea and China were among the countries that held up relatively well.
- By sector, government bonds, which make up well over half the market value of the index, held up better than corporate and noncorporate bonds.
- From a credit-quality perspective, results were mixed.

Benchmark returns in the commentary above are in US dollars.

All of the returns in this report represent past performance, which is not a guarantee of future results that may be achieved by the fund. For performance data current to the most recent month-end, which may be higher or lower than that cited, visit our website at <http://global.vanguard.com>. Note, too, that both investment returns and principal value can fluctuate widely, so an investor's shares, when sold, could be worth more or less than their original cost.

* The tracking difference between the fund return and the index return over a stated period of time can be attributed to a number of factors, including, without limitation, small differences in weightings, trading activity, swing pricing, transaction costs and differences in the valuation and withholding tax treatment between the fund and the index vendor.

The Central Bank of Ireland requires a schedule of material changes in the composition of the portfolio during the year. These are defined as aggregate purchases of a security exceeding 1% of the total value of purchases for the year and aggregate disposals greater than 1% of the total value of sales. At a minimum, the largest 20 purchases and 20 sales must be shown; all purchases and sales must be shown if there are fewer than 20. A full listing of the portfolio changes for the year is available, upon request, at no extra cost from the Administrator.

Vanguard Global Short-Term Corporate Bond Index Fund

Managed by Vanguard Global Advisers, LLC.

Investment Objective

This fund seeks to provide returns consistent with the performance of the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Corporate 1–5 Year Float Adjusted Index, a market-weighted index of global corporate fixed income investments with maturities of between 1 and 5 years.

Performance Summary (unaudited)

The Performance Summary does not form part of the Financial Statements.

- The period was defined by a historic rise in interest rates, which caused ripple effects across every sector of the financial markets and brought with it renewed volatility.
- Russia's invasion of Ukraine added to inflationary pressures from ongoing supply-chain bottlenecks and labour shortages in some sectors of the economy, lifting year-on-year inflation readings to multidecade highs across much of the world. While energy prices eventually began to cool, price increases broadened to other categories of goods and services, heightening concerns that inflation might remain stubbornly high.
- In response, major central banks wound down their bond-purchasing programs and began raising short-term interest rates. The US Federal Reserve was especially aggressive, raising the federal funds rate target from near zero in March 2022 to a range of 4.25%–4.5% by the end of the year.
- Global fixed income markets had an especially tough year, with bond yields in major economies moving sharply higher across the maturity spectrum. Global bonds ended the 12 months down roughly 16% in US dollars, as measured by the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index.
- The fund's benchmark, which is hedged to the US dollar, returned –5.82% for the 12 months ended 31 December 2022.
- By country, the United States, which has the largest weighting in the index, held up a little better than the index as a whole, as did Japan, Canada and Italy. Other index heavyweights including Switzerland, China, Sweden and Germany underperformed.
- By sector, bonds issued by financial institutions weighed more on performance than those of industrial companies and utilities.
- From a credit-quality perspective, results were mixed.

Benchmark returns in the commentary above are in US dollars.

All of the returns in this report represent past performance, which is not a guarantee of future results that may be achieved by the fund. For performance data current to the most recent month-end, which may be higher or lower than that cited, visit our website at <http://global.vanguard.com>. Note, too, that both investment returns and principal value can fluctuate widely, so an investor's shares, when sold, could be worth more or less than their original cost.

* The tracking difference between the fund return and the index return over a stated period of time can be attributed to a number of factors, including, without limitation, small differences in weightings, trading activity, swing pricing, transaction costs and differences in the valuation and withholding tax treatment between the fund and the index vendor.
