Market Commentary

Global markets remained buoyant in May thanks to another strong corporate earnings season. The most anticipated earnings report from Nvidia beat forecasts and confirmed investment in artificial intelligence (AI) is explosive. Megacap technology and semiconductor stocks continued to ride the AI wave.

Earnings season diverted attention from U.S. inflation and interest rate concerns. Markets continued to expect one rate cut in the fourth quarter, even though U.S. data has softened. The U.S. labour market continues to loosen with consecutive falls in job openings, which is good news from an inflation standpoint. Oil prices have fallen below $80 per barrel, which is positive for consumer and supports the disinflation narrative.

There is more evidence of a recovery in the global manufacturing cycle. New orders rose while inventories fell, which bodes well for output. China established a fund to buy homes to provide more stimulus for its housing market. While the scale of the housing problem remains huge, government support has boosted sentiment.

Prime Minister Rishi Sunak announced a UK general election on 4 July. Latest YouGov projection points to a landslide victory for Labour. In the U.S., Donald Trump’s conviction on falsifying business records may complicate the election outlook but polls point to limited impact. As headline-grabbing as these events were, markets barely reacted. It is a reminder that corporates, macro and central banks matter much more to markets.
